Vetch Acreage Drops Sharply In Valley Area

By LILLIE L. MADSEN Farm Editor, The Statesman CORVALLIS—Oregon's certified Willamette vetch acreage has taken a toboggan ride in the past six years. From close to 57,000 acres certified as late as 1946, acreage dropped to 269.

Vetch inspection for certification has just been completed in Oregon. A year ago, it is recalled, 390 acres passed field inspection. Records show that prior to 1951, inspected acreage had been averaging close to 3,000 annually in the majority of post war years.

Willamette vetch is a common vetch selection which at the time of its release some years ago, was characterized by winter hardiness and disease resistance. In cases of continuous vetch cropping, however, growers report that diseases have become so destructive that it is now difficult to grow with much success.

However, here at the experiment station, J. W. Ross, Oregon State College seed certification specialist reported Monday that of all common vetches tested, Willamette still rates superior. This is also true, Ross said, in the south where much seed has been sold in past years. In fact, the southern states have been the biggest market for the huge quantities of vetch Oregon formerly grew, as well as for the smaller amounts grown in recent years.

Ross blamed crop losses from winter injury and diseases and insect damage for a large part of the decline in grower interest. Lack of sufficient premium for certified Willamette vetch due to the removal of the production and marketing administration payment, is also one of the big causes of the acreage drop, Ross added. The certification specialist said that he believed the solution to vetch grower problems is a strong field rotation system where vetch is grown only once in three or four years in the same field. During off years, volunteer plants must be eliminated. Following a system of this type, he added, would put common vetch seed production on a more sound basis.

Despite the set-back in acreage, Ross said he hoped growers would continue to certify a limited acreage of the improved common vetch so that a high quality seed stock could be assured.

Driver Dies, Truck Crashes Near Bend

BEND (AP)—A truck carrying 25,000 pounds of meat and produce ran off U. S. Highway 23 miles east of Bend, knocked down a telephone pole and crashed through a fence Monday.

Wheat Prices Close Firmer

CHICAGO (AP)—Wheat futures firmed Monday on mill buying as brokers reported a lack of hedge selling pressure. Other grains and soybeans also generally moved upward.

Despite the fact that harvest operations are nearing completion in many areas, there is a general lack of hedge selling, traders said.

Wheat receipts were 396 cars, which was somewhat large but not as heavy as expected.

Some traders said that with wheat prices well under the loan rate, there are indications that many farmers are storing their wheat.

Wheat closed  $\frac{1}{4}$  higher to  $\frac{1}{2}$  lower, than the previous finish, corn was  $\frac{1}{4}$  higher to  $\frac{1}{2}$  lower, oats were ahead  $\frac{1}{4}$  to  $\frac{1}{2}$ , rye was 1 to 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  cents higher, soybeans were up  $\frac{1}{4}$  to 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ , and lard was unchanged to 7 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Fire Comes To Firemen

The horseless carriage driven by William Wegenoeth of 1207 S. Commercial St. was brought to water Monday afternoon at the Central Fire Department and, in a manner of speaking, made to drink.

Wegenroth discovered the rear seat of his car to be suddenly ablaze while driving Monday and simply continued driving right to the fire department. Firemen put out the blaze, but Wegenroth's seat was already destroyed. Fire was believed to have started from a cigaret spark.

At the Jayhawk Trailer Co., 1640 Portland Rd., on a humid Monday afternoon, a propane truck's hose connection expanded and the highly volatile, heavier-than-air propane was dissipated onto the highway. Propane which had seeped onto the highway was driven through by several cars and firemen were surprised that it didn't ignite. A fire truck stood by until the liquid was wetted down.

Burglar Takes Money, Gun

A burglary late Monday evening at the L. M. Saylor residence, 2410 Myrtle Ave., netted the prowler several pieces of personal property, $5 in cash and a .22 caliber pistol.

According to city police, entry was made while Saylor was out by slitting a screen on the back bedroom window and forcing the window. A bed next to the window was crawled over and light was created by striking paper matches.

Among the items reported stolen by Saylor were the keys to the front and back door. Light impressions of footprints were discovered by investigating officers as well as some fingerprints on the window.

Cherrians to Keep Active Organization

"The Cherrians will continue stronger than ever," was the resolve decided upon at a meeting of group Monday evening. Some 50 members were present to decide the fate of the organization.

King Bing Paul Stege had sent an appeal to the membership earlier in the week suggesting that they come to the meeting "to watch the funeral or birth of the Salem Cherrians." Earlier difficulties in getting the organization to "work as a whole" was said to be the reasoning behind this decision.

Also at the meeting of a new set of by-laws was adopted and a resolve to make the group one of 100-per-cent active membership in the future. All the present members at the meeting became active and it is to be left to the discretion of members not present whether they want to go on an inactive list and lose their voting power or become active.

The Cherrians accepted bids to attend the Stayton Bean Festival Aug. 1 and the Newberg Farmeroo Aug. 9 at which time they will enter their marching group in competition.
