A contemporary modern home with flat top roof was built this past year by the Philip Brandts. The house is ideally situated in the Zenda district overlooking the Polk County hills. Above, in the living room which features ceiling to floor windows, are the Brandts' three children, Phil, Lark and Billy. Directly above, is Mrs. Brandt, a landscape architect, in her studio, which also has a picture window to the floor. The studio is off the living room on a lower level with brick steps leading down.

Mrs. Brandt designed the house herself and she and her husband did a great deal of the inside work and finishing. The house was designed for modern, easy living to reduce the amount of housework. As the kitchen is the central working area for the housewife, Mrs. Brandt planned the children's play area opposite, so that she may watch them while at work. The dining area and living room are to the left of the kitchen. The rooms are all of hemlock and cedar, with cement floors, a brick entrance way with sliding glass front door. The living room features a corner fireplace with marble hearth, built-in benches and cabinets. The bedrooms also feature built-in wardrobes and dressing tables. The outside of the house is of cedar and a brick walk encircles the structure.

Country Living...

The Holly Jacksons' ranch style home is situated high atop a hill south of Salem three miles with a commanding view in every direction of the Willamette valley. The outside of the house is of vertical hemlock and features a veranda off the living room looking north and a covered patio the length of the house on the south side. Above, is one end of the spacious living room with beamed ceiling and Arizona flagstone fireplace with raised hearth. The floor length windows on the right overlook the veranda with north and east view with doors leading outside at one end. The three Jackson sons, year old, Ralph, Clark and Phil, are sitting on the hearth.

Birch is used throughout the house and at the right is Mrs. Jackson in her favorite room, the kitchen. Picture windows in the breakfast area look to the north and east, one of the most cheerful rooms in the house. There are three bedrooms, with the boys' room of knotty pine, a full basement with large play room and fireplace. The living room and hallway are carpeted. Early American and leather furniture are combined in the living room. Now under construction on the Jackson acreage is a barn for their horses. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and their two eldest sons ride several times a week.

The Homer L. Goulet family moved a year ago to their modern, ranch style home at Clear Lake. Above at the top is a picture of the house ideally situated in a grove of fir trees. In the center is Mrs. Goulet in the spacious living-dining room featuring a brick fireplace wall with hemlock mantel. Insert is a portion of the breakfast room with kitchen area to the right.

The Goulet home was designed for living and working conditions in the country, with outside entrances to nearly all parts of the house. A central hallway leads to all rooms, to prevent cross traffic. The kitchen area is divided into three sections the kitchen proper which is U shaped, the breakfast room and Mr. Goulet's office, with open counters between each area. The office is accessible from the outside, so that workmen and business men may confer with Mr. Goulet, a hop grower. The kitchen is of paneled hemlock and the office is of crowsfoot hemlock.

Hemlock is also featured in the living room, with green walls, figured drapes, and a beige-brown tweed carpeting. The house features a master bedroom and a large room, which is divided with folding doors for the boys, Gary and Phil.
