Middle Boat Wins Heat in Crew Event

(Continued from preceding page) All American entries survived, and one round in the 88 where again the three Americans came through.

All three Americans got by the two heats of the 400 meter hurdles as well—Moore, Lee Yoder and Ronald Blackman.

No man ever broke an Olympic record with greater ease than Moore did looking over his shoulder. How much faster he can go is a matter of conjecture, but if any world record is broken here, it will probably be by Moore.

The Russians, however, have three good men still left in the race—Jurij Lituyev, the best of them, Timofei Luney, and Anatoli Julin. The semi-finals and finals are Monday.

Competition in other Olympic sports are still in the preliminary stages.

Britains Nipped

In rowing, America's undefeated eight-oared shell from the Naval Academy beat the great British shell by a length at 2,000 meters in 6:09. Yugoslavia did 6:06 and Australia did 6:07 in earlier heats. Russia covered the distance in 6:10.2. All of these crews qualified for the next series of heats Monday.

In the sculls, Jack Kelly of the U. S. won his heat in the comparatively slow time of 7:52.5. Mervyn Wood of Australia made the best time, 7:44.1. The U.S. fours with coxswain appeared to be beaten by the British 50 yards from the finish, but the Americans put on a terrific spurt to win by a scant two feet in 7:17.8.

Husky Entrants to Qualify

The crew from the University of Washington thus qualified for the semifinals. The U.S. four without coxswain, a Naval Academy foursome, won its heat in 6:40.9 with Austria second in 6:44.1.

Stanford's team of Jim Fifer, Duval Hecht and Jim Beggs won their heat in the pair oars with coxswain after a tough battle with Hungary and Sweden. The winning time was 8:02.1. Hungary was clocked in 8:04.1, Sweden in 8:07.6.
