Sergeant Makes Tire Rack

SEVENTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Germany—A safety tire-inflation rack devised by M. Sgt. Robert Larson, 1082 First St., Salem, Ore., is shown by him. While serving with the 7th Army headquarters ordinance section in Stuttgart, Germany, he designed the portable equipment to eliminate injuries sustained in inflating heavy-duty truck tires. Larson's sister, Mrs. Leonard Shaw, lives in Salem. Larson has been in the Army since 1939 and in Germany since 1949. (U. S. Army Photo.)

Amity Reservist Enlists in Grade

Ronald N. Nelson, 18, of Amity is starting his Army service in the grade of corporal, according to word received by his former unit the 929 Field Artillery Battalion of Salem.

Nelson thus becomes one of the Army's youngest non-commissioned officers, carrying into active duty a grade won in a little more than a year of duty with the Organized Reserves. The Amity youth was a member of Co. C of the 929th stationed at Monmouth before enlisting recently.

80% Salable Walnut Rule Recommended

By LILLIE L. MADSEN
Farm Editor, The Statesman

Recommendations for a salable percentage of 80 per cent and a surplus percentage of 20 per cent, to govern in-shell marketings of the 1952 walnut crop, were the outcome of this week's meeting of the Walnut Control Board starting in San Francisco Tuesday. The recommendations go from the board to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Similar recommendations applicable to shipments within the state, were made to the California department of agriculture, word released by the board Thursday showed.

The board made its recommendations following study of reports and statistical data relating to anticipated production and marketing conditions. The Pacific Coast's crop is expected to be very large this year. The board approved official estimates for a coast orchard-run walnut crop of 80,900 tons and estimated that a total of 1,141,120 one-hundred pound bags of merchantable in-shell walnuts would be produced from this crop. This quantity coupled with handler and trade inventories of old-crop walnuts, would make a total of 1,270,120 bags available for sale in the domestic market.

Market demand for in-shell walnuts was estimated at 925,000 bags and in order to bring the available supply into a closer relationship with this quantity, the board selected 20 per cent as the necessary diversion rate for surplus walnuts. Board members indicated that this action, channeling an otherwise burdensome surplus into shelling or export outlets, will tend to stabilize the in-shell market and so provide for the most profitable sales distribution of the crop.

Other board actions included approval of a $90,000 operating budget and a supporting assessment rate of 12 cents per 100-pound bag. The Dried Fruit Association of California and the Federal-state Shipping point inspection service were designated as the official inspection agencies for California and Oregon, respectively.

A second meeting of the board will be scheduled at a later date for September or early October in Los Angeles.

Still No Trace Of H. Shepard

Harold Shepard, 49, who left home nine days ago presumably to seek employment, Thursday had still not been heard from by members of his family at 820 South St.

Mrs. Shepard reported she had called all known relatives to see if they had heard or seen him but none had.

His car was found parked on Union Street between High and Liberty Streets nine days ago with the key still in the ignition. Since that time a search by police, relatives and friends has failed to turn up any knowledge of the man's whereabouts.

Assigned to Okinawa

29TH INFANTRY REGIMENT HEADQUARTERS, Okinawa—A new assignment for Capt. Roger W. Quackenbush (left) of Salem, Ore., is made by Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler, commanding general of the Ryukyus Command. Quackenbush was with the 2nd Division in Korea and is now with the 29th Infantry. His wife, Eleanor, lives at 1701 Longview St., Salem. Inspections Prevent Fire, Optimists Told

The influence of Salem fire department home inspections has been much wider than the 1,000 dwellings actually checked, Chief Ellsworth Smith told Salem Optimist Club Thursday.

He said the inspections of some homes had encouraged many other residents to clean up "before they come here."

The inspectors have been refused entry into only eight homes, said the new chief, who headed the fire prevention bureau before his recent promotion.

This type of check, and familiarization tours of business buildings, help to keep the department's doors closed, "and the more we can do that, the more we can save the taxpayers," Smith declared.

A total of 5,000 inspections last year resulted in 2,300 recommendations for improvement of situations, and 2,100 were known to have been corrected.

It outlining structure and functions of the department, operating on a $418,000 annual budget and with a capital outlay of a half million dollars, Smith pointed out that 2,232 hours of training were given firemen last year, an average of eight hours per month per employe.

Diary-Troubled General Gets Pentagon Service

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army found a new job Thursday for Maj. Gen Robert W. Grow, the World War II tank commander court martialled for letting his diary fall into the hands of Soviet agents.

Grow was ordered to report at the Pentagon Sept. 2 for duty in the office of the chief of military history.

Assessors Training Programs Scheduled

The second in-service training meeting for assessors, tax collectors and other interested officials is to be held in Salem next Thursday, Chairman Robert D. MacLean reported.

The programs, first of which is to be held in Eugene nevt Wednesday, will consist of four lectures at each meeting on the principles and practices of assessing different classes of taxable property. Meetings will be conducted at The Dalles, Sept. 8; Vale, Sept. 10, and Bend, Sept. 11.

Skywatching Funds Sought

Director Jack Hayes of the Oregon State Civilian Defense Agency Thursday asked Attorney General George Neuner for an opinion as to whether state funds can be used for ground observation corps work, including skywatching.

The opinion was requested after officials here were advised that the attorney general of Washington state had held the ground observation corps were a part of the Air Force activities and state money could not be used.

Gov. Douglas McKay said he considered the Washington State opinion based on sound premises.

The skywatch operations in this area are being directed by volunteers.

Neuner said he hoped to have an opinion within a few days.

Flying Light Seen in City

Salem's latest "saucer" had few of the usual characteristics of roundness, glistening sides or passengers from Mars, but some residents did see a bright light flash across the sky Thursday evening "at tremendous speed."

Several observers in the vicinity of the airport reported the flying light as a meteor identified by its predominant tail. The light was traveling in a southerly direction and only appeared for a few seconds over Salem.

Fair, Labor Day Holidays Start Saturday

State and city police are due for a workout starting this weekend with State Fair beginning Saturday to kickoff a three-day holiday for many business people on the Labor Day holiday.

The State Capitol is to remain open on Monday for visitors, Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry announced. City Hall offices are to close Saturday for the three-day observance, but county offices are to remain open until their usual closing time at noon Saturday.

The absence of Salem Day at the fair this year has brought a request by the Fair Managers that employes be given a half-day off to spend at the fairgrounds.

Additional state officers are to be assigned to traffic operations throughout the state and all highways are scheduled to be under patrol. Several additional men are to be assigned to highways leading to coastal and mountain resorts.

Farm Worker Arrested in Assault Case

Albert D. Younger, West Stayton farm worker, will be tried Saturday in Marion County District Court on charges of assault and battery on his wife and of being drunk on a public highway.

Arrested by a deputy sheriff Wednesday night, Younger pleaded innocent to both charges Thursday and was being held in jail in lieu of $350 bail.

Mrs. Younger signed a complaint charging assault and battery and the deputy picked Younger up prior to that on the drunk charge.

The wife told officers Younger threatened to kill her and was choking her when their 13-year-old-son pulled his father off. The man then allegedly threw gasoline on the trailer where the family lived and on his wife. He drove away as a group of neighbors approached to stop him and was arrested when he returned to the trailer camp.

Red Prisoner Killed, Others Hurt in Camps

SEOUL (AP)— The Army Friday reported one Communist prisoner killed and 26 slightly injured in U.N. prison camps since Sunday.

A U.N. command spokesman said the report brings up to date the list of incidents which resulted in the death of four prisoners and injuries to 64 others between July 20 and Aug. 24.

The latest prisoner death was accidental, the Army announced at Pusan. A member of a work detail was killed by falling rocks Sunday near Masan, Korea, when a dynamite charge touched off a landslide. One of the 26 injured was hurt at the same time.

Fifteen prisoners suffered minor injuries Wednesday, the Army said, when guards silenced a singing demonstration in Compound F on Koje Island. None required hospitalization.

The previous day nine prisoners were injured when a song-fest was broken up in another Koje compound, the Army said.

A South Korean guard accidentally shot and wounded a prisoner at camp No. 5 near Sang-Mudai, Korea, Monday, the Army reported. The prisoner is recovering. The Army said the guard was disciplined.

Aumsville Home Destroyed in Fire

AUMSVILLE—The residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Peterson north of Aumsville was completely destroyed in a fire Wednesday believed to have been started from a faulty flu.

Firemen from Aumsville and Sublimity were unable to save the house. However, most of the furniture from the lower floor was moved to safety. The home was reported to be partially covered by insurance.

'Submarine' Causes Alarm at Newport

NEWPORT, Ore. (AP)—A low-lying boat caused widespread excitement in this coastal city Wednesday evening.

It was sighted off Yaquina Bay, and some on shore thought it was a submarine. Others said it looked more like a submarine chaser. Scores rushed to the waterfront to view it.

The Coast Guard had the last word, reporting it was a converted landing craft that hauls lumber along the coast.

PORTLAND DRIVER KILLED

PORTLAND (AP)—A rear wheel came off an automobile near Portland Thursday, and threw the machine into a ditch. The driver, Jack Miller, 21, was killed.

COLLEGE GALS WORK

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP)—About 75 per cent of the sophomore women at Santa Barbara College of the University of California are working this summer, says the dean of women. Employment ranges from playing in an orchestra to waiting table in a national park. Fifteen per cent are continuing their education this summer and many of those are part-time workers. Only between 5 and 10 per cent are taking an old fashioned lazy vacation.

Derailed Car Blocks Route

EUGENE (AP)—A derailed lumber car blocked the main Southern Pacific railroad route through the Cascades for three hours Wednesday.

The box car went off the rails 57 miles southeast of here. A double truck of wheels stayed on the track, while the car itself plunged into a 50-foot canyon.
