Miss Patricia Wilson Bride of Roger Dasch at Church Rites

St. Paul's Episcopal Church was the scene of a beautiful wedding on Saturday night when Miss Patricia Ann Wilson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kenneth Wilson, became the bride of Roger Norman Dasch, son of Mrs. Helen L. Dasch. It was at 8 o'clock that the Rev. George H. Swift performed the ceremony.

The altar was banked with all white bouquets of chrysanthemums and gladioluses and wood-wardia fern. The alternate pews were marked with clusters of the flowers tied with ice blue bows. Dozens of white tapers cast a soft glow over the sanctuary. Josephine Albert Spaulding of Portland, formerly of Salem, was the soloist and Miss Ruth Bedford was the organist.

The attractive, brunette bride was a picture in her exquisite ice blue nylon net gown as she walked down the center aisle on the arm of her father. The ankle length dress was over matching satin and the bodice was enhanced with a design of cream velvet outlined in seed pearls. The tiny, bolero jacket was made with short sleeves and she wore matching mitts and shoes. The velvet design on the gown was repeated in the headress which held in place her fingertip veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of lily-of-the-valley, white Elfe roses and spray orchids.

Attendants in Orphid
Two attendants preceded the bride to the altar. Mrs. Harvey Loveall Jr. was the honor matron and Mrs. Ben Reineckus of Sweet Home was the bridesmaid. They wore identical frocks of orchid nylon net over taffeta with fine pleating adorning the bodices and across the front of the skirts. They wore shoes to match their dresses and their pleated net headresses were caught at the sides with pink flowers. They carried round bouquets of pink Elfe roses and wood-wardia tied with blue net and ribbon.

William E. Hill stood with the groom as best man and seating the guests were Harry Russell, Portland, and James Hollis.

Mrs. Wilson selected a slate blue taffeta gown with a flower headress for her daughter's nuptials. Mrs. Dasch attended her son's marriage in a powder blue crepe-gown trimmed in grey. She also wore flowers in her hair.
