Cincinnatus Hiner! Ever Hear of Him?

Cincinnatus Hiner started growing famous in Brownsville a little later than 1852 when he rolled a big rock off the top of a high hill and killed his neighbors cow. Just a kid, he ran away from home. Grown up, he started a newspaper in Eugene, championing the cause of the South, and the irate Northern sympathizers ran him out of town. Third chapter: As Joaquin Miller, Cincinnatus built himself a house at Canyon City along about 1868, became the county judge, practiced law, commenced to grow famous in a big way, and went to London where his writings won international acclaim. The picture shows the cabin in which Cincinnatus Hiner, or Joaquin Miller, woold the Muse in Canyon City.
