Rain Brings Police Warning to Watch Out for Slippery Streets

The first of the fall rains brought words of caution and warning from the Salem Police Department directed at automobile drivers and pedestrians out in wet, slippery, traffic-heavy streets.

Capt. Glenn Bowman said all streets will be more than usually slick until after oil, which has gathered unhampered all during the summer, has been either washed off or worn off. This, coupled with the fact that rain always makes streets slippery, will mean slower driving and more recourse to brakes, Bowman said.
