WITH EISENHOWER ABOARD THE USS HELENA OFF GUAM (AP) - President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower completed a three-day close hand inspection of the Korean War situation Friday night, flew to Guam Saturday and boarded the heavy cruiser Helena.

On the leisurely trip home, he will study the information he gathered.

En route to Pearl Harbor, the cruiser is expected to pick up John Foster Dulles, to be secretary of state in Eisenhower's Cabinet, for a review of the entire Far East problem.

Eisenhower's quest for a "positive and definite" victory formula in Korea had been rapid-fire-and one which he said required time to "digest" the mass of information he had accumulated.

He was confident of ultimate success in the war against the Communists, but foresaw no quick or easy solution

Sailing Home on Cruiser

Eisenhower flew from Korea to Guam, arriving at 5:30 a.m. Guam time. A few minutes later he boarded the Helena, with sailors and ship's officers gathered on the deck craning for a glimpse of him. He was accompanied by Adm. Arthur Radford, Pacific Fleet commander. The Helena pulled away from the dock at 6:30 a.m. and headed eastward.

Eisenhower and his party gathered on the deck in mild 72-degree weather - in sharp contrast to the near-zero Korean temperatures they had left little more than eight hours earlier.

Eisenhower was expected to discuss with Dulles the policy his new administration will take in aiding South Korea both economically and militarily.

The general said in a press conference Saturday the South Korean government and people needed outside help in the fight against

Due in Hawaii on Dec. 11

The Helena was expected to dock in Pearl Harbor Dec. 11. It was believed the general would spend two or three days there before flying back to his New York headquarters.

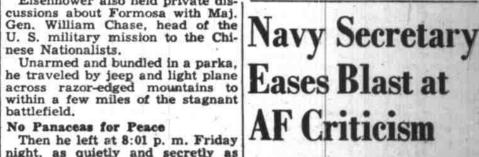

In three dramatic, action-packed days, the President-elect had viewed the war up close, talked to high military advisers and men in the ranks and with officials of the Korean republic. He left behind him:

1. A statement that, while there was no easy solution to the Korean problem, "much can be done, much will be done" to improve the situation-without spreading the war to the Chinese Communist mainland.

2. A promise that the South Korean Army will get "bigger and better" during his administration, and that economic aid will continue.

3. A vastly cheered President Syngman Rhee, described by a spokesman as "more confident than ever" after his talks with the Eisenhower also held private dis-
