

HST Ridicules Action to Curb Ike's Powers

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman was quoted as saying Thursday that action by Senate and House committees to curb President Eisenhower's government reorganization powers "was a squirrel-headed thing to do."

The ex-President made the observation while taking his customary early-morning stroll at independence, Mo., Edward F. Woods of the Post-Dispatch reported.

In approving a bill extending for two years the President's power to reorganize the executive agencies, the government operations committees in the two branches of Congress Tuesday made it easier for Congress to reject any of those plans.

Truman said Dean Acheson, who served under him as secretary of state, had done as much as former President Herbert Hoover in drafting recommendations for more efficient government "but those pin heads never gave him any credit for it," Woods reported.

Truman expressed hope he will be able to listen to President Eisenhower's State of the Union Message next Monday. The Post-Dispatch story said Truman added with a grin:

"But I won't be in a hurry to rush out with my opinions in five minutes like some of those brainy and mighty-doomed congressmen who always know more than anyone else on any subject."

Truman appeared nettled, the newspaper said, by criticism he drew from some congressmen for his recent statement that he isn't sure the Russians have perfected a workable atom bomb.

Quoting Truman on this subject, the story continued:

"They have been scaring a lot of Americans to death with some irresponsible statements about this thing. I thought it was my duty to set this right."

"I think we ought to settle down and be sensible. We've got a job to do building up our strength to resist anything that may come along but meanwhile we've got to go along living sensibly. There's no use scaring people to death."

WASTE PAPER GROUP

NEW YORK (AP)—Many of the materials used to modify paper and paperboard prevent its being used a second time. As a consequence the Waste Paper Utilization Council has been formed for the express purpose of keeping waste paper, the second largest source of cellulose fiber, usable.

About half of the paper and paperboard industry depends on waste paper as its chief source of raw material. Nine million tons were consumed last year, the pulpwood equivalent of at least 15 million cords of wood.

"Goodness! What's happening?"

You tap the shoulder of a spectator and ask what's happening—even though you are seeing the action with your own eyes.

Chances are that he doesn't know what's happening any more than you do. Chances are he'll have to get a newspaper to find out—just as you will.

Then for the first time you'll find out that the fight was the upshot of a long resentment between two factions in town — ignited when someone tried to take a photograph of someone in one of the groups.

In short, being on the spot is not much better than seeing one or two photographs of the action.

Photographs, announcements, headlines or brief announcements can whet your appetite for news, but they cannot satisfy your hunger for the whole story.

That's what the newspaper is for. Newspapers bring news — pictures and sufficient words.

• This goes for advertising, too. The brief message that hangs in the air . . . or brief headlines here or there . . . may indeed have a momentary interest.

But the newspaper ad carries the bristles quality, the urgency of the newspaper itself.

Like a news item, the ad can be examined and re-examined. Can be read any time. Anywhere. Can be clipped and carried in a pocket-book.

Add to all this the fact that newspapers reach just about everybody in town, not just fractions of audiences, and you know why the newspaper is the nation's most effective advertising medium.

No wonder advertisers—both retail and national—invest more money in newspapers than in any other form of advertising.

The newspaper is always "first with the most"
