'The Machine' Gets Blame for Art 'Insanity'

LOS ANGELES—Lord Dunsany, Irish playwright, dramatist and poet, says some creative artists show signs of insanity.
He blames the machine.
Slipping tea, the chin-whiskered 6-foot 2-inch Irish peer told an interviewer:
"The shock to the human nervous system produced by the machine is far too great. We no longer live attuned with nature, but that's not all of it."
"Sensitive people are going mad more than 100 representatives of toastmasters clubs from Salem, Albany, Corvallis, Woodburn, Silverton and Lebanon."
"It accounts, too, for the obscenity of literary production these days. Insanity and obscenity are related."
"People ask me, 'What do you think of modern poetry?'"
"I answer them, 'Don't ask me; you should ask a doctor about it.'"
"This tendency was felt first, perhaps, in poetry. We have the poem without meaning and without rhyme, meter or rhythm, not even as much rhythm as good prose should have."
"How blame the machine for all this?"
"Many people make two trips a day in a motor car for a half hour or an hour, traveling at 50 miles an hour," Lord Dunsany replied. "The houses and the people and the other motor cars and the landscape flash by them."
"This is a series of unrelated pictures which are presented too rapidly and in too great a number for our minds to coordinate."
"Humanity, let us say, is like

Solons Asked to Approve Vote Age Drop to 18

College and high school teachers and students asked the House State and Federal Affairs Committee Saturday to approve a proposed constitutional amendment to reduce the voting age in Oregon from 21 years to 18.
They argued that 18-year-olds now are trained in citizenship, and that reducing the age to 18 would keep up their interest in government that is acquired in high school.
They stressed that 18-year-olds are entitled to vote because they fight in wars, pay income taxes, and are required to participate in government in other fields.
Dr. Helen Gilkey, who recently retired after being an Oregon State College faculty member for 50 years, said "students of today are more world-conscious. They are alert and more informed. They haven't lost the ideals like their elders have. Letting 18-year-olds vote would make them keen, intelligent and useful citizens."

Howard Morgan, chairman of the State Democratic Central Committee, also urged passage of the amendment, which would be referred to the people in Nov. 1954.
