Industrial accident benefits were claimed by 440 teen-age workers during the last 12 months, Labor Commissioner W. E. Kinsey said Tuesday. Investigation of the young workers' claims showed that 35 per cent of the youngsters had been hired illegally, he said.

The greatest number of young claimants, 223, were on the payrolls of the manufacturing plants. The mercantile industry employed 66. Third highest employer of the injured minors was government, state, county and municipality. Almost three-fourths of the teenagers were engaged in industries outside the Portland metropolitan area.

Among those claiming incapacitation because of the job and discovered to be working illegally were one 12-year-old, two 13-year-olds and a 14-year-old. One 10-year-old agricultural worker put in a claim for injury after he slipped in a shed and hit his head on the concrete floor.

3 Prisoners Make Abortive Escape Attempt

A trio of Oregon State Prison inmates, all classed as troublemakers, were back in their cells following an unsuccessful escape try early Tuesday morning.

Warden Virgil O'Malley said the three used emery dust-coated slings to saw their way through the bars of a segregation cell window. The incident occurred while three out-of-state prison wardens were in Salem making a survey of prison conditions.

O'Malley attributed "the quick and alert action" of two prison guards for the quick recapture of the inmates.

The warden said the three were Lawrence Oglevie, 37, serving a life-term for murder; Guy Earl, 25, serving 10 years for armed robbery, and Raymond Knight, 19, sentenced to 10 years for holding up Chuck's Tavern near Gates last June 26.

O'Malley said the men sawed through the outside basement windows bars in the old "B" block about 2 a. m. They squeezed through to the ground in an area between B and C blocks. Officer Edward Thornton heard them and spotted them outside. He nabbed Oglevie but Earl and Knight disappeared in the darkness.

Officer Emil Sundborg, with the aid of several other guards quickly found the missing pair hiding in a basement of nearby "C" block.

O'Malley said the trio apparently picked the locks of their cells in order to let themselves into the segregation corridor to work on the outside window bars. O'Malley said the cell locks, which have figured in previous escape attempts at the prison, are old and easily picked.

Prison records show the inmate trio have been troublemakers in the past. Oglevie was sentenced to an additional year in prison in 1949 for arson in his part of the prison flax plant fire. Earl and Knight figured in the Feb. 9 riot of 20 cons who held five guards hostage for nearly four hours.
