Portland Trio Now Ineligible

PORTLAND (U)—Tom Pigott, secretary of the Oregon School Activities Association, said Friday three Portland high school athletes have been ruled ineligible because they accepted outside awards for their sports accomplishments.

Pigott listed the three as Richard Costi, baseball player for Washington High School; George Bardsley, track from Benson, and Traver Campbell of Grant, also a track letterman.

In previous cases of a similar nature, the offending athletes have been reinstated after returning the awards.

Pigott said Campbell received an award from the Oregon Sports-casters Association Tuesday. Bardsley and Costi received trophies from the Young Life Campaign at a banquet Thursday night.

San Diego Boss Speaking... Starr Defends Coast League's Open Status

LOS ANGELES (U)—Critics of the Pacific Coast Baseball League may be afflicted with "the snobbery of identification" with large cities of the major leagues. President Bill Starr of the San Diego Padres said Friday.

In a militant speech before a Rotary club, Starr defended the Coast League's stand against any possible encroachment by a major franchise of PCL territory and praised its new policy of open classification.

The "snobbery of identification" phrase came when Starr, who has represented the PCL in many of its negotiations with the major leagues, said the critics seem to yearn to be classed with New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Starr declared population is not a true factor involving major league baseball. Give a city first class baseball and the classification—a term he said was over-emphasized—will take care of itself.

He predicted that the open status in the PCL will prove successful. Escape from the major league draft and elimination of all working agreements and option rules will permit the Coast League to develop and keep its talent, he said.

Baseball, like the entertainment business, relies heavily on star attractions. The major league clubs can no longer reach down and pluck a club's main attraction, he pointed out.

Central Denies Order Received

INDEPENDENCE—(Special)—School authorities at Central Union High school Friday denied reports that the school had received an order from the Oregon Schools Activities Association to forfeit all basketball games won during the recent season. It was reported that Central unknowingly used an ineligible player.

Central didn't win any games during the cage campaign, so had nothing to forfeit even if the order had come from the OHSAA.

Scribe Rasps Crosby, Hope

LONDON (U)—A sports writer for one of Britain's biggest newspapers said Friday Crooner Bing Crosby and Comedian Bob Hope should be barred from taking part in the British Amateur Golf Championship at Hoylake in May.

The same applies, said Daily Express Columnist Desmond Hackett, to various "elderly American business men" who somehow turn up on the entry list year after year.

Hackett is one of Britain's most outspoken critics of America. Crosby is en route to England for the tournament but Hope's entry has not been announced.

Hackett accused Crosby of turning the 1952 amateur circuit into a cheap circus and said Hope "made an ass of himself and a bigger ass of British golf when he clowned around in the amateur at Porthcawl two years ago."

Hackett complained female Crosby fans at St. Andrews "ran screaming all over the course, treating through bunkers, stamping their ignorance on the greens with high heeled stampeding shoes."

Little Yid Favorite In Grand National Go

LIVERPOOL (U)—Little Yid, who was bred by a bookie and once sold for 40 guineas ($120), held tightly Friday to his new-found high station in life—top favorite in Saturday's Grand National steeplechase.

Should Little Yid win at Aintree, racing would receive one of its greatest stories of social climbing. Generally the odds on Little Yid are 10-1, which is mighty short for a horse from such humble beginnings.
