Reds Dispatch Invasion Force To Tiny Laos

HANOI, Indochina (#) - The Communist-led Vietminh shot a third invasion force into the little buffer kingdom of Laos Sunday, apparently aiming it at the royal Laotian capital of Luangprabang. This spearhead struck from mountain strongholds in Northwest Indochina and pushed south of Dien Biet Phy, 180 miles northwest of Hanoi. The invaders attacked three mountain posts defended by French and Laotian troops but failed to knock them out and lost about 60 men. To the southeast two other Viet-minh columns are driving hard toward Luangprabang, a city of 145,-000 about 235 miles inland from the Gulf of Tonkin.

French and Laotian troops are throwing up a defense line on the Plain Des Jarres to meet these thrusts from the northeast and east and the coming week may see a major battle. The plain is 18 miles northwest of Xieng-khouang, a city of 84,000 which already has been evacuated by civilians. Xiengkhouang is 96 miles southeast of Luangprabang, the residence city of King Sisavang Vong.
