Modern Etiquette
By ROBERT A. LEE
Q. When a business girl visits an old friend over the weekend, a very close friend whom she has known for many years, is it necessary for her to write a bread-and-butter letter?
A. She would be exceedingly rude if she failed to do so. This is one of the most important indications of good breeding, and no matter how often you visit a certain friend for an overnight stay, a bread-and-butter letter is in order each time.

Q. Is it really improper to butter an entire slice of bread before beginning to eat at the dinner table?
A. Yes, it is. The proper, and only accepted, way is to break off one mouthful at a time and butter it.
Q. What is the correct acknowledgment to most introductions?
A. You can never go wrong with a sincere smile and a "How do you do?"
Q. Is a "dinner coat" the same as a "tuxedo"?
A. Yes; in fact, "dinner coat" is the preferred term.

Cinderella Item Paper Napkin Has Interesting Success Story; New in Design

By MAXINE BUREN
Statesman Woman's Editor
Speaking of Cinderella, what about the lowly paper napkin's life story?
Once upon a time, paper napkins were wisps of ex-pulp, either white or in some unimaginative design, to be used for children's parties, picnics or other affairs where etiquette allowed. Designs were usually some pretty flower. Fourth of July pattern or other holiday motif. Designers, if there were any, must have been picked up from the soup-line.

Slowly the acceptance of the paper napkin in better society has taken place. Now little wisps of snow-white or pastel paper are permissible at rather nice parties—more sophisticated designs for informal affairs. Seldom does one see linen napkins at larger teas or receptions; paper is proper.

We checked at the stores where paper napkins are sold, just to see what the modern designer has done for this household item.

LOTS OF CHOICE
We frankly were amazed at the variety and volume of napkins available. Of course one can still get the same sort of design as ever but with a more modern feeling. However, the newer types are the interesting ones.

First, paper napkins now-a-days come mostly in three sizes, the small or cocktail size, luncheon size of 12 inches and the 18 inch square dinner ones. The latter is heavy enough, so they're good for more than one single wipe—a handy feature when finger food is served and the napkin is really needed.

Many of the napkins now come in all three sizes, you can get some of each, or make your selection. There are designs that look like gingham, checks and all over figures. There are patterns with attractive borders either wide or narrow and peasant figures.

CIRCUS DESIGN
One design features circus figures in a sophisticated treatment, and other is of very modernistic fruit designs. All over pattern of roses and another in a "Jaquard" pattern of blues and greens.

To cap the climax of informal dining there the ensemble of ranch design dishes—plates, cups, sugar and creamer—and paper napkins to match. You can get book matches in the same design, too.

There is an entirely different line of napkins from these sophisticated adult ones and those are the kid designs. Just to make life easier for mama when a birthday party is coming up, she'll find the paper napkins to match the paper plates and cups. These then serve as favors as well as utilitarian uses.

The shopper for paper napkins can certainly now find anything his heart desires in this line, and can be just as fancy or simple, sophisticated or naive as he pleases and save on the laundry while doing it.
