

Fishing Plays Big Part in Many Vacation Plans

YACHTS—Fishing from the rocks at the mouth of the Yachats river along the central Oregon coast is a year around pastime for the fishing enthusiast. Fishing derbies are sponsored throughout the year by the neighboring towns of Yachats and Waldport.

All Kinds of Angling Available To Growing Army of Nimrods

To America's ever-growing army of anglers, "vacation time" is apt to be just another way of saying "fishing trip." For the true disciple of Izaak Walton, the question of "what to do" on a vacation seldom, if ever, arises. He knows he's going fishing.

There remain only the questions of when and where he's going to, and what he's going to take along in the way of tackle, gear and togs.

As to the "where" and "when," that depends, of course, on the kind of fishing he enjoys most. America offers, in bountiful array, most every kind of fishing that any angler might fancy.

He can pursue the flashing sail fish in the warm waters off the southern coast or skillfully stalk the wily trout in some tumbling mountain stream.

He can enjoy the thrills of surf fishing from a sandy beach.

He can match his skill with the fighting salmon in Oregon's streams or pit his craft against the fighting tuna and marlin in the sky-blue waters off Montauk, L. I.

And trout in Oregon's streams and lakes are "way above par." Yes, America is all things to all fishermen! Off-shore fishing is enjoyed along both coasts and in the Gulf of Mexico. Splendid trout streams course through practically every State, while fresh water lakes sparkle their invitation to anglers within an easy drive of almost any spot one might pinpoint, blindfolded, on the map.

Of course, certain areas are favored for particular kinds of fish. Many say that pike and pickerel are best caught in the lakes, beyond numbering, in Minnesota and Wisconsin. Famed round the world are the channel bass taken at Chincoteague, Va.

The doughty muskellunge gives worthy battle to fisherman on the Great Lakes, the St. Lawrence and other Northern rivers; and weakfish at Peconic Bay, Long Island; albacore off Catalina Island; amberjack, at Pass-A-Grille, Fla., white fish in the Great Lakes.

It all adds up to this: The American angler is indeed a fortunate soul—he can write his own ticket!

Check Your Tackle

Having decided where and when he's going, the next item on the angler's schedule is a good long look at his tackle.

"Is it up to date?" he asks himself. New rods, new reels, new type of line and many new lures are making their appearance almost daily.

The angler knows that only by frequent trips to the tackle store can he really keep abreast of developments. He determines to stop in soon with a view to rounding out his tackle with "what's new" and "what's good."

He will find plenty of news in spinning tackle this year. Never since it came into favor some 18 years ago have so many new and improved items bowed in. Along with the many new products introduced by American manufacturers, is a host of interesting new developments from European makers.

COAL CUTS

PARIS, June—(INS)—Paris informants say American officials are about to propose that Western Europe's 55,000 coal-burning locomotives be changed into oil-burners. This will enable Western European nations to cut down their imports of Iron Curtain coal.

MATCHING WITS AND SKILL against the wily trout in cool coastal or mountain spots is a sport that is luring more women into the ranks of enthusiastic anglers every year.

Many Facilities For Overnight Camps Ready

Oregon is opening many of her state parks for overnight camping again this year.

Greatly increased patronage is deemed certain for this vacation year.

Special overnight camping facilities are at Silver Falls State Park near Salem and Willowa Lake State Park in Northeastern Oregon. These two facilities will include electric stoves, wood stoves, a utility building for washing, ironing and bathing and specially constructed niches for trailer houses, including water and electrical connections.

A nominal charge will be made for overnight camping privileges at all state parks opened to the public for this purpose. These camping places will be in addition to over 250 U. S. Forest Service camps in Oregon's 13 national forests.

Petroleum has been found on every continent.

Sweden estimates that her iron ore reserves will last 300 years at the present rate of mining.

Hells Canyon Popular Mecca For Tourists

Hells Canyon will be seen by more of the traveling public this summer than ever before—both boat and motor trips through and to this deepest canyon on the North American continent will be offered for the summer season.

The Baker, Oregon, Chamber of Commerce will sponsor motor trips to the edge of the canyon, overlooking the Snake River, from Homestead, Ore. Arrangements may be made for this trip by writing Hells Canyon Tours, Chamber of Commerce, Baker, Ore.

Blaine Stubblefield, famous for Snake River boat trips, will take visitors by boat through Hells Canyon from Robinette, Ore., to Lewiston, Idaho. Stubblefield may also be contacted through the Baker chamber.

The trip by boat takes visitors through canyon walls, 7,900 feet deep and through some of the most thrilling rapids on this continent.

Check tire pressure frequently when touring.

Columbia River Gorge Highway Popular Trip

Every Oregon visitor will want to take the scenic Columbia River Gorge highway while visiting in the Beaver State. This highway takes visitors to eight lovely state parks, 11 waterfalls in 11 miles and to panoramic viewpoints overlooking the giant Columbia river.

Southern Oregon Offers Attractive Loop for Visitors

A popular loop trip in Southern Oregon is from either Klamath Falls or Medford via Oregon State Highway 62 to Crater Lake, U. S. Highway 99, Oregon State Highway 66 and U. S. 97, encompassing the Green Springs and Dalles-California Highways.

Besides Crater Lake, set in the cauldron of an ancient volcano is worth the trip, other sights along this loop are Upper Klamath Lake, Oregon's largest, Lithia Park in Ashland, site of the Shakespearean Festival, gift fruit packing plants at Medford and the Upper Rogue river.

Metolius River Scenic Loop in Central Oregon

During a trip to Central Oregon, the motorist should not miss driving the Metolius river, Crooked River, Prineville Loop.

From Bend, take U. S. Highway 20 to Suttle Lake and Metolius Junction. Visit Suttle Lake and the Springs of the Metolius River at Camp Sherman. Return on U. S. 20 to Sisters and join U. S. 126 to Redmond. Northward on U. S. 97 visit Peter Skene Ogden State park bridge over the Crooked River. Skene Ogden State Park (high Gorge) and Cove Palisades State Park (where Crooked and Deschutes rivers join in a deep gorge). In the Redmond area visit Petersen's Rock Gardens and return to Bend by U. S. 97. Be sure to see the view from atop Pilot Butte State Park at Bend.

NAMES
VIENNA, June—(INS)—According to a government decree in Communist Czechoslovakia all streets named after the late Eduard Benes have to be renamed and "should bear names more correspondent with the situation now prevailing" in this Soviet satellite.
