Jersey Folk To Picnic at Yaquina Park

More than 500 folk are expected at the annual Oregon Jersey Cattle Club picnic according to the report of Jeff Moldin, Otis, at the Wednesday meeting of the Oregon Jersey Cattle Club.

The meeting was called by the president, Neal Miller, Woodburn, for the purpose of discussing picnic plans and routine business including the All-Jersey Milk problems.

The picnic will be held at Yaquina Bay at Newport with the Lincoln County club as host. Charles A. Sprague, editor of The Oregon Statesman, Salem, was announced as picnic speaker.

Special congratulations were voted to be sent to Ralph Cope Jr., of Langlois upon the production of his Jersey cow, Opal Crystal Lady, which has produced 1,000 pounds of butterfat annually for five years.

"This is a big honor for Oregon dairymen," President Miller stated.

Discussion of obtaining another fieldman to replace Robert Romeril, who resigned some weeks ago, was held, but no decision reached.

Greetings will be sent to Marlin Fox, past state president, who is at the Silverton Hospital following a series of heart attacks. He was reported as showing improvement but still denied visitors other than the members of the family.

Attending the meeting, in addition to Miller were Ed Blinkhorn, Oregon City, secretary; Ted Hobart, Salem, treasurer, and Newt Davis, Woodburn; Charlie Finnigan, Oregon City; Burton Bell, Monmouth; Mr. and Mrs. Modlin of Otis; Vernon DeLong, LaGrande, Mr. and Mrs. John Gale, Canby.

Gale reported on the "fine progress" of the All-Jersey Milk program, not only in Oregon but in adjoining states.

The Salem Business and Professional Women's Club committee chairmen met at the home of Miss Almyra Sappenfield Tuesday night to select committee members for the ensuing year. Twenty-three were present with Mrs. E. E. Wooten, the new president, presiding. A late supper was served by the hostess.

Leo Harvey Visits Salem to Look Over Alumina Plant; Production Start Waits on Negotiations Plans to Test Process for Two Years

Leo Harvey, the California industrialist interested in alumina production and a new television venture in Salem, visited the city Wednesday to look over the Cherry Avenue alumina plant he is buying from the government and to confer with Chamber of Commerce leaders.

He confirmed that his Harvey Machine Co. is ready to put the North Salem plant into operation as soon as long-pending negotiations with the government's General Services Administration are completed. The plant was built at a cost of several million dollars by the federal government for wartime experiments with production of alumina from clay.

Rehabilitation of the plant already has been started by the Harvey firm. Arch W. Metzger, manager under former ownership, will continue to manage the local industry, Harvey said.

Two-Year Pact

Chamber leaders with whom Harvey lunched at the Marion Hotel said they would support his position in seeking an operating agreement of two years with the government, rather than five years as requested by the GSA. The government is putting such a clause into the sale agreement to make sure the plant will not be dismantled.

Harvey said the firm would be able to determine in two years whether the proposed alumina production can be successful or whether the plant will have to be converted to some other use.

Energetic Man

It was a get-acquainted appearance of Harvey in Salem. A genial, energetic man whose forceful personality belies his age of 67, Harvey said he grew up in the machinery business, has seen steady development in the now vast Harvey Machine Co., Torrance, Calif., which he started 40 years ago.

He has been an inventor and designer throughout his business career. Besides machinery, his inventions include such sidelights as the now-common paper spoons for ice cream. Once when architect's plans didn't suit him, he tore them up and designed his own home—a circular structure, mostly of glass, atop a Hollywood hilltop.

In Real Estate

He also has been active over many years in real estate transactions in the Los Angeles area. His latest big business venture is developing an aluminum plant at The Dalles.

He is the father of Lawrence Harvey who is heading the television company preparing now to operate in Salem.

"All I know about its progress," Harvey said Wednesday, "is that we've ordered all the equipment we need from RCA."
