

Map Outlines Proposed Zoning Code; Hearing Set Tuesday

Rezoning of the city of Salem is proposed in a brand new zoning code which has been developed over the past 2 1/2 years by Salem Planning and Zoning Commission.

The new code incorporates some new policies like arterial street setbacks, off-street parking requirements and vision clearance along with lot area standards, height restrictions and other limits on the use of land.

The public will have its opportunity to express an opinion on the various proposals at a public hearing before the commission Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in City Hall.

Later the zoning code revision will be before the City Council for final legislation and sends the relation of his own another public hearing will be set.

Principal features of the proposed code have been explained in The Statesman's news columns in recent days.

But to most individual cit-property to zoning can best be checked on the city's zone map.

Appearing above is the proposed new map on which each block of city property is marked with the abbreviated designation of the zones which are set up in the new code. An earlier map was printed prior to a series of informal hearings before a zoners' revision committee. On the basis of citizens' statements at that time, several changes were made in the map, and these changes are reflected in the above map.

The residential zones are indicated as R1 (single family), R2 (multiple family), R3 (apartments, hotels) and R4 (small lots allowed). Business zones are C1 (neighborhood busness), C2 (restricted business), C3 (general business) and C4 (central business district). M1 is light industry and M2 heavy industry zoning. G1 indicates public buildings. P-zones are other public uses of property.
