

States to Get Federal Fund Game, Fish Projects To Be Given Boost

WASHINGTON (AP)—Allocation to the 48 states of $16,064,516 in federal aid funds for wildlife and sport fishery restoration and development projects was announced Wednesday by Secretary of the Interior McKay.

State game departments have been apportioned $11,784,600 for restoration and development of wildlife resources in the year ending next June 30 under the Pittman-Robertson Act. States have to contribute not less than 25 per cent of costs for projects which must be approved by the secretary. Sport fishery work got $4,289,916. The wildlife total to the states is $1,759,494 greater than last year's allotment.

The territories received the maximum amounts permitted under law, $75,000 for Alaska, $25,000 for Hawaii and $10,000 each to the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico. The fund comes from the 11 per cent federal excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition levied on manufacturers. McKay said a total of $12,147,554 was credited to the fund in the year ended June 30 and all of it has been allotted for distribution to the states and territories and to meet cost of administering and Pittman-Robertson Act.

Increased Allotment
The appointment for sports fishery restoration projects is an increase of $1,791,389 over last year. These funds are allotted under the Dingell-Johnson Act and come from a 10 per cent excise tax on fishing rods, creels and other equipment, paid by the manufacturers. Under this program states submit projects to the Fish and Wildlife Service and, after approval, carry them out, putting up at least 25 per cent of the cost. They file reimbursement claims with the service for the remaining 75 per cent of the costs.

Under both wildlife and fish programs a formula is used in allotting the money to the states which takes into consideration the ratio of the area of a state to that of the entire country and the ratio of hunting or fishing license holders in a state to the total for all states. Top allocations are limited to five percent of the fishery fund.

By states, the allocation includes:
Wildlife funds: Oregon $288,637, Washington $314,483.
Sport fishery funds: Oregon $92,832, Washington $101,620.
