Promotion of City Gas Plant Plans Rebuked

WASHINGTON — Growing references to activities of "promoter-engineers" was noted Wednesday at a Power Commission hearing on applications to pipe natural gas to the Pacific Northwest.

Attorneys for several groups indicated they planned to make a determined effort to discount testimony of Earl Porter, an engineer who said 12 Washington State cities authorized him to testify they want to build distribution systems if natural gas is brought in.
Since Porter began testifying Tuesday, several attorneys have tabbed as "promoter-engineers" those who persuade city officials to make plans to build and operate municipal distribution systems.

Engineering Firm
Porter is with Porter, Barry and Asso., of Baton Rouge, La., a consultant engineering firm which surveyed potential gas markets in Washington and designed plans for the municipal distribution system.

He testified over the protest of George Meiburger, lawyer for Washington Gas and Electric Co., which distributes manufactured gas in several of the cities mentioned by the witness.
Meiburger moved to block the testimony on the ground that Centralia and Chehalis, which are served by Washington Gas and Electric, have not authorized Porter to say they intend to construct new distribution systems in competition with existing systems.

Discussion of Letters
Hearing Examiner Glen R. Law admitted Porter's testimony after discussion of the city's intervention in the case and of letters and telegrams sent by the cities to Porter and to attorneys representing them at the hearing.

Lawyers for several groups, including the principle applicants for the Northwest, questioned Porter on the adequacy of his market, or engineering reports and on his arrangements with city officials.

Many Applicants
Service to several of the cities represented by Porter is not planned by applicants for pipe line construction licenses. The applicants include Westcoast Transmission Co. and Trans-Northwest Gas Co., both of which would handle Canadian gas, and Pacific Northwest Pipeline Co., which would sell gas from the San Juan Basin field in Colorado and New Mexico.

Porter testified on details of eight of the twelve projects he recommends. He proposes that the cities pay for the projects by selling revenue bonds in these amounts:
Mt. Vernon, $800,000; Anacortes, $975,000; Buckley, $215,000; Centralia, $840,000; Chehalis, $625,000; Enumclaw, $750,000; Marysville, $335,000; Moses Lake, $400,000; Quincy, $260,000; Tumwater, $252,000; Washougal, $345,000, and Winlock, $250,000.

The 12 cities would tap any pipeline authorized to bring gas to the Pacific Northwest. Estimated maximum daily gas demand for the group would be 14 million cubic feet.

Police Arrest German Reich Party Leader

HAMBURG, Germany (AP) — Dr. Werner Naumann, a leader of the Nazi-like German Reich Party, was arrested Wednesday night after he ignored a police warning not to take part in a political rally.
Some 400 of his political followers filled a public hall with loud protests when police ordered the one-time Nazi bigwig to leave the platform.

"Let Naumann free," the crowd shouted. "We want Naumann."
Naumann, political hope of his party in the September election, was asked by police officials earlier not to appear because his political enemies might cause trouble.
Released later, Naumann called a news conference and said a "misunderstanding" arose because police advised party headquarters and not him personally that he should not appear at the rally.

Sheep Moved, Left Wool-less

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Montana transplanted a wild big horn mountain ram with curious results. The ram and 15 other big horn sheep were planted on an Eastern Montana ranch with a view to restoring the breed in that region.

A Jordan rancher wondered what 11 wool-less lambs in his herd would bring on the market. Sportsmen wondered if this could be the start of a new game species. And Montana state biologists planned to learn if the hybrid offspring would be sterile.
