VETCH SEED OKED
Shipments of Oregon vetch seed moving into Arkansas do not need to be fumigated, the State Department of Agriculture announced Friday. For a number of years all Oregon vetch seed shipped into that state has moved under an official fumigation certificate because of presence of vetch weevil here. Arkansas revoked its quarantine after vetch weevil was found in that state.

Milk Blamed For Much of Child Illness

A report that one Oregon doctor has attributed probably a third of the childhood sickness on the increase in his area this summer—to milk from questionable sources Friday prompted the State Department of Agriculture to issue some warnings about milk sources.

Approved sources of milk are available throughout Oregon, and if anyone has any doubt about the wholesomeness of the milk and cream he is using all he needs to do is to check with the department at Salem, department officials said.

Each milk source on the department's approved list is inspected regularly for compliance with state sanitation standards and the dairy cows are tested regularly for Bang's disease and tuberculosis, the two diseases which may be transmitted to humans if milk is not properly protected.

Needlecraft Big Item in Fair's Agenda

By LILLIE L. MADSEN
Farm Editor, The Statesman

Oregon's big farm show is just two weeks off today (Saturday) and things are beginning to shape up considerably at the Oregon State fairgrounds. Interest continues to run high and it started somewhat earlier than usual this year, Leo Spitsbart said Friday.

And while the show is considered an agricultural event, it's by no means all agriculture. Edna Ullman, head of the textile division, said, as she sketched briefly some of the plans for her division, and "there are no entry fees in our division," she added as she reminded the textile exhibitors that entries would close Tuesday, Sept. 1, at 8 p. m. There are some very fine awards, however, including cash ones.

The National Needlecraft Bureau offers $2,600 in their national crochet contest. There are three all-expense free trips to New York City, but contestants must be entered in the Oregon State Fair to enter the national contest.

The textile room has been repeated this year to show exhibits to a better advantage. Mrs. Ullman names her divisions to include household furnishings, such as buffet and dresser scarfs, chair sets, and so on; towels, tea towels and table mats, in applique, embroidery, cross stitch, painting, handweaving, knitting; bedroom linens, table furnishings; quilts; rugs, knitting, plain sewing; a division for women over 70, which has been very popular in recent years; the men's department; embroidered all-hangings, needlepoint, handweaving, a baby department and a division for children's clothing.

Last year, Mrs. Ullman recalls, there were many entries in the men's division. More than $60 in cash awards alone, are offered in this one division this year. Any textile handwork made by a man is acceptable in addition to special division for needlepoint, afghans, hooked rugs, embroidered pillow cases, hand woven towels, crocheted table cloths and bedspreads.

Announcement hasn't been made as to whether there will be a "queen of the kitchen" again this year or not, but in addition to regular cash prizes, a number of special prizes are also offered in the foods division. Bonus prizes are being offered for the best jelly, the best canned fruits and the best preserves, provided they are made with a certain brand of sugar. A number of bonus prizes are also offered by special cake flour companies.

Like in the textile division, there will be no entry fees charged in the food division this year.

Steimonts Awarded Photography Honors

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Steimonts, Salem photographers, have been awarded five Certificates of Merit by the Photographers' Association of America at its 62nd annual national convention which ended Friday in Chicago, Ill.

About 5,000 portrait, commercial and industrial photographers attended the meeting. Six hundred of the 8,000 photographs submitted in the contest were judged superior.

Disease Rate Drop Shown

Marion County has had a comparatively disease-free week, W. J. Stone, health officer, reported Friday.

Three cases of mumps were reported in Salem during the week of Aug. 8-15. Measles cases totaled 3, hepatitis, 3; virus pneumonia, 1; poliomyelitis, 1, and whooping cough, 3.

Fifty-five per cent of the county's physicians reported, Stone said.

During the month immunizations were given for smallpox 65, diphtheria 146, whooping cough 146, tetanus 143, typhoid fever 3, Rocky Mountain spotted fever 10, and measles 25.

County Zoning Plans Studied

Problems confronting zoning of Marion County were discussed Friday at the regular meeting of the County Planning Commission held in the courthouse.

Harry Freeman, Portland planning consultant, addressed the group and pointed out a few of the myriad problems facing the commission. One of the first things includes an analytical study of the needs of the area with regards population trends, needs of park boards and school boards, as well as planning for street alignment, drainage and traffic problems. To aid this study a full time technician will begin working Sept. 8, Freeman said.

"We've never tried zoning Marion County before," V. D. McMullen, one of the commission members explained. "If our study is successful we'll present a proposed plan to the voters in 1954," he said. Chairman of the commission is William Merriott, Woodburn. The next meeting is to be Sept. 18.

Cleated Tractors Damage Highways

Damage to Marion County roads by cleated tractors gave rise to a complaint voiced Friday by Commission E. L. Rogers during the regular session of the Marion County Court.

"It doesn't seem right that roads which cost the county all the way from $6,000 to $10,000 a mile to surface should be ruined in this manner," Rogers said. Several instances of destruction to roads in this manner occurred on roads only recently oiled, Rogers pointed out. These surface breaks result in water seepage and subsequent cracking of roadway.

Constitution Procedure Ruling Told

No proposal for a new state constitution can be submitted to the people except by a constitutional convention, Attorney General Robert Y. Thornton ruled Friday.

The ruling was made in an opinion to state Rep. Mark O. Hatfield of Marion County who had asked if the legislature could submit an entire new constitution to the people without using the procedure of a constitutional convention.

"The legislature has authority to propose amendments (to the constitution)," Thornton pointed out. "It can not validly resolve itself into a constitutional convention and submit a whole new organic document."

Thornton also told Hatfield that the committee for constitutional study appointed by the last legislature "can not be deemed a commission with power equal to that of a constitutional convention."

In view of the fact that this committee was created by resolution and such a resolution is not a law "it is clear that the legislature had no other purpose than to obtain the advice of the committee," Thornton pointed out. "It did not contemplate that the findings of the committee would appear in any form other than a report to the 48th legislative assembly. In any event no proposal for a new constitution can be submitted to the people except by a constitutional convention called as provided by the existing constitution of Oregon."
