

Blue Ribbons Assigned Livestock, Food at Oregon State Fairgrounds

Of almost as much interest to young and old fairgoers as the carnival attractions have been the large number of Aberdeen Angus cattle in the fair barns. Here are Fred Rankin, left, with the junior and grand champion, Glenmere the 2nd of H-R owned by Harold and Oda Rankin of Hermiston. Gene Jesse of Hillsboro, shows the senior champion, Eric Supreme, owned by H. W. Ray of Hillsboro. (Statesman Farm Photo.)

4-H Judging To Continue To Saturday

Four-H Judging and demonstrations won't end at the Oregon State fair until Saturday afternoon. Each day new awards are announced. Thursday's include: Frances Hughson, Albany, was chosen as blue ribbon winner and first alternate in the senior canning contest, and with Mary, will enter Oregon State college this fall.

John Belton, Clackamas county, won high individual poultry judging honors, followed by Joe Barnes, Multnomah county, and Wanda Herrick.

Sheep Winnings
An 83-pound Southdown lamb was named grand champion market lamb at state fair 4-H sheep exhibits. Owner, Irwin Riddell, 14, Independence, was dubbed reserve champion showman a few hours earlier.

Ringside spectator, brother, David, age 9, when asked if he also had sheep, answered "all Riddells got sheep." He placed second in Southdown ewe lamb competition, and sister Billie Jean, 16, showed the champion Southdown ewe.

The reserve champion market lamb, a 68-pound Southdown, was owned by Barbara Jefferson, 11, Madras.

4-H Auction Of Fat Stock Slated Today

Nearly 200 4-H market lambs, hogs and steers will be sold today at the annual fat stock auction at state fair starting at 10 a.m.

It is expected to be the largest in the history of the 4-H event. Burron Hutton, state 4-H agent, says beef judges rated the 4-H steers superior in finish to anything they had ever judged in 4-H competition at the fair. Only five of the 67 steers which will be sold graded lower than choice.

Approximately 275 animals will go into the auction, including the steers, fat lambs and hogs.

Unwanted Dogs, Cats Cause Man Problem

MULLENS, W. Va. (AP)—Enoch Cook complains that a wide spot in the road near his house is becoming a dumping place for unwanted dogs and cats.

Since the community has no humane society, Cook says it's his unpleasant duty to dispose of the animal waste. He suggests that the pet deserters also leave a bag containing some 22 calibre bullets "if they want me to share in their unkind deeds."

All sheep judging was completed Thursday morning in the open classes at the state fair with the championships named in the various breeds to include: Hampshires, Gath Bros., Turner, American Hampshire Sheep Association special, John S. Banick & Son, Brooks.

Green Dress Steals Show, Prize Ribbon

A forrest green botany wool crepe dress stole the champion ribbon in the 4-H clothing IV division at the state fair. Made by Diane Jones, Albany, the dress is a smart garment for dressy occasions. Diane also made a handsome rayon crepe slip to wear under her dress. Brown accessories have been chosen to wear with the dress for special occasions.

Top beef results included: Hereford steer, owned by Frances Dardorff, 17, Prairie City, was judged grand champion in 4-H competition with a record number of entries from all corners of Oregon. Jim Towery, 15, of Marion, showed the reserve champion, an Angus.

Cal Monroe, state 4-H agent, said this year's 117 entries more than doubled those of two years ago and were half again larger than last year. Exhibitors brought 67 steers this year compared with 35 a year ago.

COUNTY HERD: First, Yamhill County; second, Jackson County; third, Crook County; fourth, Benton County; fifth, Grant County; sixth, Linn County; seventh, Marion County; and eighth, Clackamas County.
