Valley's Prep Football Outfits to Get in First Major Licks Coming Weekend

The Willamette Valley's prepothall legions get in their first big lick of the season Friday. Some of he squads got under way last weekend, but the majority will be making their deouts this week.

Most important of all locally will be the Salem Vikings clash at Astoria. The Salems opened with an impressive 21-0 victory over Cleveland of Portland last week, and could conceivably be off and running in one of their

The Spokes get the entire players' pot, but strangely enough and only because the league this year was run much like a flat-wheeled express on a milk run track, they won't know how much loot they won until the circuit directors meet at Yakima this month . . . Spokane Mgr. Don Osborn gets the last laff at Spokane, and good for him. Not a popular guy with the fans there because, as he puts it, "I won't do hand stands in the coaching box," he still wound up with the pennant to go along with his resignation . . . New football coach at Canby High, replacing Hank Ercolini who moved into Chuck Sheron's job at Woodburn this year, is Keith Marshall, well known hereabouts for his southpaw softball flinging for Campbell Rock Wool teams in recent seasons. Oregon fans aren't the only ones to bask in the video sunlight this early football season as their pet Webfoots battle Nebraska Saturday in the nationally televised clash. Oregon State followers can sit at home and watch the Beavers play UCLA also, even though it will be four days after the game. KPTV next Tuesday night (6 o'clock) will offer the Oregon State-UCLA game as its "Western Football" feature. The game itself will be played Friday night at Los Angeles . . .
