Senator Ballplayers Depart for Winter Homes, Jobs

By AL LIGHTNER Statesman Sports Editor

Their season a shambles after osing the 1953 pennant battle with the Spokane Indians, the bulk of the Salem Senators base-ball squad wasted little time in heading for winter homes and jobs following Tuesday night's final game.

Harvey Storey's printed statement that he was trying to land the Salem Senators' managerial job now that he's been fired at Vancouver turns out to be naught but imagination on the part of the Vancouver scribe who wrote it. In town this week for the playoffs, Storey told that he would be interested in the Salem job only if Hugh Luby were to land a better spot. —say the Oakland berth in the Coast League.

"I have no intention of going after Luby's job here," told Stor-"That story obviously came out of a conversation I had with Luby in Vancouver awhile back, one that was overheard by reporters. I merely mentioned to Hugh that if he were to get a better job in the Coast League I would be interested in the opening at Salem."

Storey feels rather bitterly about the shake he got at Vancouver, and few can blame him. Everyone in and around the league, with the exception of Caps Boss Dewey Soriano, figured that Harv did a good job in his first effort at managing . . .

McGriff-Elliott Feud Keeps Former Idle

Reason why noted stock car auto racer Herschel McGriff doesn't appear on Oregon speedways: He's having a feud with Ray Elliott, president of the Oregon Stock Car Racing Association, same stemming from the Mexican Cross-Country driving championship they won as a team a few years back. The rift became so keen that Elliott finally sued McGriff, but to no avail.

Might be a good idea for the Valley Sportsters to let the rivals settle things by matching 'em in a driving duel, at 50 laps with double bumpers and lances.

Something should be done about it, as McGriff is one of the top stock car pilots in the nation.
