All Alpha Chis in the city and vicinity are invited to attend and those wishing transportation are asked to call Mrs. Gilmore.

Hello, this is Mary again. Say, you'll be interested to know that part of the wallpaper and fabric samples which I wrote about last week have started to arrive. Just yesterday the Museum Collection of matching fabrics and wallpaper, one of the hand print wallpaper volumes, and a big batch of the samples came. Half of the samples are yet to arrive, but it shouldn't be long.

I told you I knew I'd be thrilled at seeing the samples again—we put one correlated group out for display—tones of venetian pink and charcoal. The color of the pink denotes the theme of the pattern of the chintz—"Grand Canal"—a romantic scene of the canals and gondolas in Venice—the famous city of bridges. This pattern could be used for side draperies in a grey and charcoal living room. The subtle tones of the venetian pink could be repeated in draw draperies of a sheer silk casement which would cover the glass area and filter the light of day and hide the black of night. With this combination we put a beautiful textured matelasse in pink and charcoal which could be used for upholstery on a pair of chairs in the room.

Another print in the new group is on an imported batiste. Almost every fabric line showed some airy, light-line prints on batiste—a fine, fine cotton, as washable as your finest hankies. This one is called "Golden Apples," and another is "Little Bouquets."

Something that will just tickle you is called "Gay Nineties" and has little modern drawings of victorian tables, chairs and lamps that were in your Aunt Matilda's parlor. It depicts all the furbelows and what-nots of the gaslight era. Use the one with the pink background for your bathroom curtains, and paint to the colors in the fabric. Then a white bird-cage planted with greens, and an antique picture frame for the mirror would just finish it off. Don't be afraid, now—dare to do something really individual. Why you could even have pink shutters at the lower sash of your window! Might as well expose your family to something different than that green or peach bathroom you've been living with for ten years—wouldn't you have fun shocking them? Come on down and be exposed yourself—we'll dream up something just for you!

See you next week,

Joan Newcomb Victor Cobos Wed Saturday

Mrs. James C. Drury is announcing the marriage of her only daughter, Miss Joan LaVerne Newcomb, to Victor Cobos of Los Angeles, which was quietly solemnized on Saturday morning in the study of the First Christian Church.

The Rev. Donald B. Payne officiated at the 10 o'clock nuptials before members of the immediate family.

For her wedding the bride chose a pink brown crepe gown with bolero jacket and a mocha brown ostrich feather hat. She pinned a corsage of green orchids to her ensemble. The bride was unattended and James C. Drury Jr. served as best man for Mr. Cobos.

The newlyweds were honored at a wedding breakfast at the Marion Hotel following the ceremony.

After a wedding trip along the Oregon coast the couple will be at home at "Half-a-Hill," occupying the Drury residence while Prof. and Mrs. Drury are in New York this winter.
