

Amity, Estacada Set for Playoffs

Friday Night Contests Due

Warriors Face Monroe Rangers Eye Lions 11

AMITY—(Special)—The Amity High Warriors went through another heavy workout Wednesday in preparation for their Friday night State Class B semifinals football battle with Monroe High. The game is to be played under the lights of the Linfield College stadium at McMinnville.

While Amity swept by Gervais last week in quarter-final action by a 41-20 score, Monroe was eliminating Oakland by an equally impressive 33-20 count. The outcome of Friday night's game looms as a toss-up, and the winner will next week play for the state B championship.

Coach Ray Stephens' Yawama League champions, who won six, lost two and tied one over the regular season, probably will start Bob Engelland and Sam Wilcox at ends, Wes Kosta and Doug Ingram at tackles, Al Kilmer and Glen Stevens at guards, Jack Larson at center and Merle Stephens, Jerry Lanbardi, Walt Lawson and Don Martin in the backfield for the big game.

More workouts are planned for Thursday and Friday.

Interest in the playoff game is high here and it is a certainty that a large group of Amity rooters will accompany the team to McMinnville.

ESTACADA — (Special)

Coach Keith Moore and his Estacada Rangers hard at it again Wednesday as the team prepared to battle St. Helens here Friday night in the State Class A-2 semifinals football game. The clash, first prep grid game of its kind for Estacada, will get under way at 8 o'clock, and a capacity turnout is assured.

The Rangers eliminated Cascade High 18-0 in their quarter-finals game last Saturday at Stayton. The powerful St. Helens team knocked over Reedsport by a 33-12 score at the same time.

Estacada goes into the game with a perfect record of nine wins, having scored 240 points to but 24 for the opposition.

St. Helens boasts nine wins and one loss for the season. The Lions lost only to Tigard 13-6 at the start of the season. The Lions, second place finishers in the A-2 ranks last year, have scored 266 points to 74 for the opponents.

Iowa Wingman Handed Honor

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)—Iowa's big Bill Fenton, whose rugged end play in Iowa's unexpectedly top-heavy 27-0 victory over Minnesota earned him honors as The Associated Press Lineman of the Week, is hoping for another Hawkeye surprise against Notre Dame Saturday.

The senior end, who blends exceptional pre-medical school grades with outstanding athletic ability, said "We definitely have a chance against Notre Dame."

Iowa, with a 5-3 record and shooting for its best season since the fabulous ironmen of 1939, plays the nation's No. 1 team at South Bend. It will be the final game for Fenton in three years of Iowa stardom.

Cage Officials Exam Tonight

The annual high school basketball officials examination and clinic is to be held tonight, 7:30 o'clock, at the Senior High School in the Chorus Room, which is located in the back end of the school auditorium.

Olen Hawes, secretary of the Oregon Schools Activities Association, will be in charge of the meeting and exam, along with Salem Athletic Director Vern Gilmore.

All officials who expect to work high school games the coming cage season must take the examination to become certified.

Cameron, 2 Indian Aces Coast Offense Leaders

LOS ANGELES—(Special)—Paul Cameron, Bob Garrett and Sam Morley have strangleholds on their respective rushing, passing and receiving crowns but every other statistical battle is wide open as Pacific Coast Conference teams head into their final full weekend of play.

Figures released today by the PCC Commissioner's office showed Cameron with 618 yards rushing and a lead of more than 100 yards over Aramis Dandoy, Southern California, 505, and Dick James, Oregon, 479.

Garrett has completed 106 passes for 1506 yards and five interceptions for a commanding margin over Sandy Lederman, Washington, 80 completions, and Paul Larson, California, 72. Garrett threw three TD passes Saturday to run his total to 16, thereby smashing the old PCC season mark of 15 (Bob Burkhardt, WSC, 1951). He has a completion mark of 59.6% and an outside chance to crack Don Heinrich's record 60.9% set at Washington in 1950.

Player-Pilots a Vanishing Race

NEW YORK, N. Y.

The day of the playing manager in baseball seems to be drawing to a close. There was a time when several clubs would have an outstanding star at the helm. Nowadays it's a rarity.

One of the truly great performances of a player-manager took place in 1948 when Lou Boudreau, in his seventh season as pilot of the Cleveland Indians, swatted a most 355 and batted two post-seasons as a player-gamer to pace the Tribe to a pennant and World Series victory.

Just for curiosity, I got out all of my record books, a carton of Chesterfields, and spent the day compiling quite a satisfying list of player-managers of days gone by.

I wonder if you remember that Leo Durocher played his first five years as manager. Never much of a hitter, Leo batted a healthy .277 in 1920, his first season as a pilot. When his Brooklyn aggregation won a pennant in 1941, he rapped .286 in 18 games.

Frankie Frisch played his first four years at the helm of the Gasbag Gang in St. Louis. The Flash took over in 1933 and batted .303. He walloped .305 in 1934 when he won a pennant and World Series. He hit .294 in 1935, .274 in 1936 and then retired after playing in only 17 games as skipper in 1937.

Joe Cronin was an active star when he became manager of Washington in 1933 and won a pennant. He remained a player-manager until 1945 when he participated in only three games. He won one pennant and finished second on four occasions. He won another pennant in 1946 after his retirement from active play.

Mickey Cochrane hit .320 and .319 his first two seasons as manager and swung the bat for Detroit. Ty Cobb had some of his greatest seasons as player while manager of the Tigers from 1921 through 1928. A second-place finish was the best he could do. Jimmie Dykes played from 1904 to 1909 while managing the White Sox, but could do no better than finish third.

Grimm Played Until '36

Charlie Grimm hit .307 for the Cubs in 1932 and won a pennant. Grimm was still an active player when he finished third in 1933 and '34 and won another pennant in 1935. He finished second in 1936, his final season as a playing manager.

Rogers Hornsby, like Cobb, was a manager during many of his great playing years. He piloted the Cardinals, Braves, Cubs, Browns and Reds. He won one pennant, for the Cardinals.

Gabby Hartnett was a star catcher for the Cubs when he won a pennant as manager in 1938. He played the next two seasons, but finished fourth and fifth. Bucky Harris took the reins of the Senators in 1924 and won two straight pennants at the height of his playing career.

Tris Speaker piloted Cleveland to a pennant and three second-place finishes while having his great seasons as a player. Mel Ott had four active years as player-manager but could not find a winning combination for the Giants. John McGraw hit .390 his first year as manager of Baltimore and finished fourth. When he won pennants for the Giants in 1904 and 1905, he played very little. Bill Terry hit .350 when he replaced McGraw in 1932. Terry won a championship for the Giants in 1933 and hit .342. He batted .319 when the Giants won a pennant behind him in 1936.

Pie Traynor, George Sisler, Jimmie Wilson, Joe Tinker, Miller Huggins, Napoleon Lajoie, Connie Mack, Roger Bresnahan, Frank Chance and Bill Carrigan all spent years as playing managers.

Although Patsy Donovan was an outfield star, he had little success as a playing manager for Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Washington and Brooklyn. Charles Comiskey won pennants his first four years as playing manager. Clark Griffith won 24 games, as pitcher-manager for Chicago in 1901.
