Warning Told On Cutting of Yuletide Trees

Commercial Christmas tree cutters must obtain harvesting permits before harvesting trees from forest lands, Lynn F. Cronemiller, assistant state forester, warned Wednesday.

Harvesting permits can be obtained by making application to the local forestry headquarters of the various districts located throughout the state, Cronemiller said.

Prospective cutters of Christmas trees also were reminded it is necessary to make arrangements to purchase the trees from the landowners. In addition, the forester cautioned the tree cutters they must comply with the provisions of the Oregon Forest Conservation Act which requires that sufficient trees be left on the land to keep it well stocked and productive.

Landowners must also obtain a harvesting permit and comply with the Conservation Act when harvesting trees from their own property.

Individuals cutting trees for their own use do not need permits, Cronemiller said, but must obtain permission from the landowners.

The Forester estimated that nearly 1,000,000 Christmas trees were harvested in Oregon last year. More than 500,000 were shipped out of the state with 300,000 sold in Southern California markets. Oregonians used an average of one Christmas tree for each four persons.

Douglas fir is still the favorite of Christmas tree shippers, Cronemiller said, although inroads on the fir's popularity have been made by Noble Firs and Shasta Red Firs.

Cronemiller said there will be plenty of trees for everyone but hinted they might be a little more expensive than last year.

Jacobson's case was on appeal after he was found guilty in Justice of the Peace T. C. Gorman's court at Woodburn Oct. 14, 1952. Gorman fined him $100 on the drunk driving charge at that time.

SALEM HIGH SCHOOL

The assembly consisted of singing by the "A" choir, under the direction of Howard Miller, a short play and the closing benediction by Reverend George H. Swift, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

The play carried out the idea that people in the United States take luxuries for granted and don't realize how much they have to be thankful for. Participating in it were Marjorie Bright, Bernice Bright, Anne Tarem, Sirri Kaelvi, Bill Cook, Stanley Lee, Terry Jew, Terry Green, Beverly Lockard, Jim Heath and Kay Salter.

Lighting Crews To Dig Trenches In Willson Park

Second phase of the city's Willson Park lighting improvement program will begin Monday when workmen of the city engineering department start digging a maze of trenches for the new cables.

The 18-inch-deep trenches will be along all the paths through the park to the west of the State Capitol. After the cable is put in, 33 tall light standards will be erected.

Standards are now being altered and wired at the city shops, report engineering officials. The standards are those formerly used on downtown streets which since have been illuminated with the new, higher and brighter type of street lighting.

Pouring of concrete footings for the 33 new park lights was completed recently.
