

Brownell Says White Report Found in Mass Of Misplaced Papers

By E. L. LIVINGSTONE
WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Brownell said Sunday a 1945 FBI espionage report naming the late Harry Dexter White was discovered among 20,000 missing documents after he took office last year.
"It apparently had been 'shoved in a drawer,' he said, and had never been seen by the department's internal security section or evaluated officially. He said "we found a great many evidences of slipshod work when we came in," and blamed the delay on that.
The report has since been studied, Brownell said, but he did not indicate what, if any, action will be taken on the basis of it.
Brownell was asked during a radio-TV interview (CBS' Man of the Week) why he picked a Chicago luncheon address to charge that President Truman had promoted White to the International Monetary Fund at a time when White was under investigation as a possible Soviet spy.
"Indicating he had learned of the report only a short time before his speech last Nov. 6, he said "I thought of the quickest way I could tell this story to the American people," and picked that address which already had been scheduled.
His speech caused national repercussions, but Brownell said he thought he would do the same thing again under similar circumstances.

He said he thought it was a "valuable contribution to the public welfare" to let the people know what had been happening.
Brownell noted that after the Chicago speech, he appeared and testified under oath about the White case before the Senate internal security subcommittee.
"Discovery of the FBI reports among a mass of old papers was recounted by Asst. Atty. Gen. Warren Olney III, in testimony before the House Appropriations Committee made public Sunday. Olney appeared before the committee last Dec. 8 on department budget requests.
Olney told the committee that a housecleaning of criminal division files was undertaken because of concern over misplaced papers and lost correspondence.
"The results of that housecleaning were amazing," he said.
"Twenty thousand items turned up in the course of it—letters, files, investigative reports, everything. None, or at least most, of the material had ever been to the department's record branch for recording. Many unanswered letters were found, some of them dating back 15 years.
"Among other things found was the FBI report on Soviet espionage," he said.
"This report on Soviet espionage that was prepared by the FBI, a copy of which was sent to the attorney general's office in 1945, had never been seen by Mr. Foley (William Foley, chief of the internal security section) until September of 1953."
"We still do not know where it came from. It was somewhere in this mass of papers."

It would have the government transfer title to federal forestland to private timber owners who have a sustained yield cutting and processing operation interfered with by government condemnation of some of their private holdings for a federal project, such as a dam or a power line.
A handful of Democrats vowed to fight against approval of the bill, having failed in conference with Ellsworth to obtain a compromise on the key issue—transfer of title from federal to private ownership. Rep. Lee Metcalf (D-Mont.) doubts they will have sufficient votes to stop the bill in the House, but he said conservation groups plan to muster strength meanwhile in the Senate where they feel chances are better for blocking the bill.
Congressman Ellsworth said he was willing to make several changes in his original bill to satisfy doubts raised in the last session when the measure was first proposed. In its revised form, the bill provides as follows:
1. Whenever the U. S. finds it necessary to acquire for any public use timber lands which are being operated as part of a sustained yield of timber for processing purposes, and such acquisition reduces the allowable cut of the sustained yield operation to such an extent as to seriously interfere with the existing processing operation, the government shall provide that similar and suitable federally owned lands situated within the same community area shall be transferred to the owners of the acquired private lands.
2. Values of the two tracts involved shall be fixed by negotiation or in the manner applicable to condemnation proceedings.
3. The federal agency having jurisdiction over the land, either the Forest Service or Bureau of Land Management, shall participate in handling the exchange. Exchanges limited.
4. No exchange can be made from lands within national parks, monuments, wildlife refuges, administrative sites, wild or wilderness areas, forest experimental areas, and developed recreation areas. The Interior Department asked for this safeguard.
5. Before any transfer shall be made, "an advisory public hearing may be held by the department or agency having jurisdiction to gain the views of interested parties as to whether the private timber is under sustained yield cutting, whether it will be interfered with by loss of the land acquired by the government, whether the transfer will be in the public interest."
Protest Lodged
The bill has been endorsed by the Department of Interior but not the Forest Service. The Forest Service last spring protested the bill was "undesirable from a public standpoint," but their report was later withdrawn by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson.
Ellsworth explains the purpose of the bill is to assure that a small community and its lumber industry that are dependent upon a sustained yield operation would not suffer economic hardship if part of the timber is acquired for government use.
Metcalf maintained the same purpose could be served by giving the private operators a long term lease, rather than title to the forestland, so that the Forest Service or BLM could continue to assure sustained yield cutting, watershed control and grazing supervision. He said he feared the bill would foster further development of the checker board pattern of federal and private lands, and it would set a precedent by which any citizen could demand federal property in lieu of his own property that is condemned for government use.

Ellsworth to Push Timber Exchange Bill

By A. ROBERT SMITH
Statesman Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — The first controversy to reach the floor of Congress this year involving legislation directly affecting Oregon will be touched off this week when Rep. Harris Ellsworth (R-Ore.) calls up for a vote his timber exchange bill.
It would have the government transfer title to federal forestland to private timber owners who have a sustained yield cutting and processing operation interfered with by government condemnation of some of their private holdings for a federal project, such as a dam or a power line.
A handful of Democrats vowed to fight against approval of the bill, having failed in conference with Ellsworth to obtain a compromise on the key issue—transfer of title from federal to private ownership. 5. Before any transfer shall be made, "an advisory public hearing may be held by the department or agency having jurisdiction to gain the views of interested parties as to whether the private timber is under sustained yield cutting, whether it will be interfered with by loss of the land acquired by the government, whether the transfer will be in the public interest."

Motorcycle, Auto Collision Fatal

ROSEBURG (AP) — Calvin Fred Marshall, 25, of Roseburg, was injured fatally Saturday in a motorcycle-automobile collision three miles south of here.
Marshall's motorcycle rammed into a car which was making a turn off the highway, state police Sgt. Holly Holcomb reported. The driver of the car, Richard R. Milin, also of Roseburg, was cited for failing to signal properly.

Boy Leaves Theater Via Fire Truck

PORTLAND (AP) — With the help of two policemen and a fire truck, 8-year-old Aaron Jones finally got out of a movie theater here early Saturday.
It was 2 a. m. and he was standing on a second-floor window ledge, crying for help in a small, frightened voice, when the police came upon him.
Afraid the boy would fall from the narrow ledge before they could get the theater manager down to unlock the theater, the police called a fire truck to the scene. With its ladder the boy was rescued.
He explained tearfully that he had fallen asleep at the movie, and when he woke up he was in the dark and alone.

Scrub Women Demand Right To Be Seen

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The women of the bucket brigade at City Hall say they are sick and tired of being told to get lost when the various offices open in the morning.
Their sentiments are embodied in a complaint sent to Philadelphia's managing director Robert K. Sawyer by Dennis S. Welsh, president of the Philadelphia Civil Service Employees Assn.
"The 'domestic workers,' Welsh asserted, have to come in at 3 a. m., clean until 8:15, then 'withdraw from all offices."
"I have been informed," he went on, "that their supervisor has instructed them to keep out of sight until their regular quitting time at 1:30 p. m."
That is rather undignified, the chore corps feels, adding that it also means cramming eight hours work into three.
And besides that, the women add, partly, there aren't many good places to hang out.
"Maybe we aren't glamor girls," one of the cleaners was reported as saying, "but if we're good enough to do the work we're good enough to be seen. And we don't get in anybody's way."
What the women would much prefer, Welsh told Sawyer, is a straight night shift.
Sawyer withheld comment pending a week-end study of the complaint.

Michigan Man Jailed After Fight With Dead Bear

DETROIT, Mich. (AP)—Detroit police got the bear facts Saturday—all 365 pounds of them.
The puzzling case began when owner Cass Steck reported that a black bear, which he had killed and intended to serve to his customers Sunday, had disappeared.
A bus driver's tip led police to Zigmund Mucha, 24, and the missing carcass was found in the basement of the Mucha home.
Mucha said he visited the tavern Friday night, but was a bit hazy on details. He told police he grappled with the bear outside the tavern and after defeating it, took it home.
Police returned the bear to Steck so the dinner could go on as planned. Mucha was locked up on a charge of grand larceny.

Eisenhower Says Faith in God Needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower said Sunday that this nation needs now, as it did throughout its history, "positive acts of renewed recognition that faith is our surest strength, our greatest resource."
The President made this statement in an address delivered during an American Legion-sponsored radio-television broadcast as part of the organization's "Back to God" program.
Eisenhower described the Legion program as the kind of a "positive act" of faith needed by this country.
"As a former soldier," the President said, "I am delighted that our veterans are sponsoring a movement to increase our awareness of God in our daily lives. In battle, they learned a great truth—that there are no atheists in foxholes."
Eisenhower was joined in the half-hour broadcast by churchmen representing the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths. They were Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, Bishop Fulton J. Sheen and Rabbi Norman Salt, all of New York City.
"Back to God" movement was an outgrowth of the 1951 convention of the Legion at Miami. It is held each February on a date which coincides with the date on which four military chaplains heroically gave their lives for others when the troopship Dorchester was sunk in 1943.
A Legion official said it was felt that Four Chaplains Day, honoring four men of different faiths, was an appropriate day on which to hold the "Back to God" program.
Its basic theme is an appeal to the people of America and elsewhere to seek divine guidance in their everyday activities, with regular church attendance, daily prayer and religious training of youth.
