YWCA Preview

By MRS. FRANK H. SPEARS
What the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) means to our community is a difficult topic for me. For to me it means to each one of us a somewhat different thing. Its opportunity for service is outstanding, for even he lowly of us are given the privilege of sharing our interest, charms and friendship with others.

There are four City YWCA's in the state, Portland being the first, Salem the second, followed by Eugene and Astoria. Forty years ago when the YWCA was developed and organized by the Salem Woman's Club, classes were formed to give opportunities of study for busy women. The classes were not only practical, but for entertainment and cultural purposes as well. Our beloved Mrs. Alice H. Dodd gave a history of art class, which I will long remember.

Today the YWCA offers languages, English, art, bridge and many other classes. The social clubs for all age groups and interest have always been active and willing to cooperate in gaining what each group was striving for.

Our Girl Reserve groups (now Tri-Y and Y-Teen) of 25 years activity are far reaching today. England feels their criminal problems have increased due to lack of activities for their young since and during the war. Never once in the 40 years since the Salem YWCA was organized has its doors been closed to either old, intermediate or young women and girls.

The American woman is intelligent and active. She needs, as does her men, an opportunity to serve and give to the world. Here in the YWCA is a place to both give and take. My hope and prayer is that the future holds this for every woman and girl in Salem, and our new building gives you that opportunity.

A Bit Of This-'n-That
By Sid Boise and George Huggins
QUESTION: Who is Lloyd's of London?
It was in the late 1700's that a group of London businessmen began going to Edward Lloyd's Coffee Shoppe for their mid-morning coffee break. (Ed was selling coffee for a farthing with no additional charge for refills!) It was decided that the perils of the sea were too hazardous for the iron men who manned the wooden ships and that something should be done to compensate those who lost their cargoes. So, contracts of insurance were devised and those men who were interested in assuming a percentage of the risk (for a fee) were asked—now get this—to "write" their names "under" the contract form. Thus evolved the term "underwriter" which is now taken to mean anyone who considers himself an expert on evaluating a risk.
In the U. S. the only insurance that may be written by Lloyd's is that which the American insurance market cannot or does not wish to handle. In other words, Lloyd's writes only those risks that are "surplus" and this is usually referred to as "surplus line" business.
Lloyd's is represented in the U. S. by brokers who in turn use the facilities of local agents who place their surplus line business with the brokers. Usually, the cost of this insurance is in excess of that which would be paid should the same coverage be available on the American market. In short, Lloyd's names its own rate for a given risk.
