Some Trees In Corridor Must Be Cut

Some of the old growth timber in the Henry B. Van Duzer Timber Corridor must be cut down, according to a release made Saturday by the Oregon State Highway Commission.

An increasing amount of blow-down of timber on the south and west sides of the corridor is blamed for this necessity. The corridor is located along the Salmon River on State Route 18 just west of the Cascade Range summit.

A report from the commission explains that on Jan. 21 of this year some 600 trees in the corridor blew down, 68 of which fell across the highway. On this singular occasion, nine cars and 15 people were caught between the falling trees.

Other serious falls have occurred along the corridor on Nov. 13 and 24 of 1951, Dec. 17 and 18 of 1951 and Jan. 7, 1952. Since the Commission has the responsibility of the traveling public, it has been ordered that these danger trees be removed as soon as possible.

Crash Brings Damage Suit For $40,593

A suit for judgments totaling $40,593 was filed with the Marion County clerk's office Saturday by a Woodburn girl who was a passenger in a two-car collision last Aug. 23.

The girl, Barbara Baumann (through her guardian ad litem), includes as defendants Marcia Labar, Woodburn, who was driver of the car, and Verlin Kauffman, Mulino, driver of the other car. The accident occurred at Molalla and Barlow Roads west of Molalla.

Miss Baumann was thrown from the Labar auto by the impact of collision. She claims to have sustained a laceration near her ear, abrasions about the face, shoulder and knee as well as lacerations about her body and fractures. The complaint asserts that she will be unable to continue normal work for the remainder of her life.

Three other Woodburn girls in the Labar auto at the time of the wreck sustained only minor injuries. Miss Baumann seeks $40,000 general and $593 special damages.
