Down South, Away Down

Tropical Fruits Have Made Place For Themselves on Everyday Menus

By MAXINE BUREN
Statesman Woman's Editor

I can remember when bananas were not an everyday purchase in our home, nor were they available in the markets all the time. I remember, too, one of my brothers requesting as a birthday present, all the bananas he could eat. I recall the first avocado I ever ate—it was a bit unripe, therefore not up to full flavor and without immediate success.

The original fresh pineapple in my life was brought by boat from Hawaii, and was sour because picked too green. I have yet to make the personal acquaintance of a papaya, though not for lack of opportunity for these fruits have come into the market in rather large numbers this year.

EVERYTHING TODAY

How unlike the eating advantages of our own youth, are those of today's child. Fruits of the tropics are in the markets daily, and probably most city children think them as easy to obtain as local apples and pears.

Modern refrigeration methods and air shipping facilities have done this for our children, and incidentally for Mamma, who can have just about anything on her menus these days. Bananas, strangely enough, which used to be considered all but indigestible, are now given to infants and the aged. This certainly, is a happy state of affairs. Bananas have taken their place with gusto as cooked food in the past few years.

Trying dipping banana chunks in fritter batter of egg and crumbs and frying them in deep fat sometime, they go very well with meat, or if for dessert, with lemon sauce or spiced cream.

GLAMOROUS FRUIT

Fresh pineapple, of course, is one of the more glamorous of foods from the tropics. Cored, peeled and cut in slices or fingers, fresh pineapple can be sprinkled with powdered sugar, allowed to stand awhile and served just as-is, or piled back into the shell for a beautiful service.

One very elegant idea is to make ham loaf, shape it in a mound the size of a large fresh pineapple half with an indentation in top. Bake the loaf and slip it into the pineapple half on a platter. Pile fresh cubes of the pineapple on top of loaf, add a fruity French dressing and serve.

You can do other things with the pineapple, like cutting off the top, removing the center and using the case for salad, or baking a meat loaf in the casing, garnishing with the leafy top and serving with cubed, spiced pineapple.

OFTEN USED

Avocados are everyday food around our house, and on these pages. The fruit is seen at all markets all year. Good for salads, hot dishes and appetizers, avocados add color as well as flavor to the menu.

Avocados, like apples, are grown in many varieties. Some 14 out of 99 commercial avocado varieties are now grown in California, labeled by the growers association as top grade and sold in our markets.

Though they are certainly not new, they only this year arrived here in any quantities. The main use for the papaya is to merely eat it, we are told. But you can do a few other things with the fruit too.

For instance, you can mix the pulp with shredded toasted coconut, spread it in a baking dish, add orange custard and bake it. When cool, loosen with a sharp knife, convert on cold platter and garnish with jelly.

Secretaries Are Entertained

The Cascade Chapter, National Secretaries Association, met at the home of Mrs. Claude Borszich, 3380 Duncan Avenue, Tuesday evening. Co-hostess was Mrs. Lindley Keeney.

The ways and means committee reported that the rummage sale held on Saturday was very successful.

A favorable vote was cast to accept State Organization on a trial basis, if the other Oregon chapters were agreeable to this arrangement. There will be a vote on establishing State Organization in each state at the annual National Convention of the National Secretaries Association to be held in New York City sometime in July.

A luncheon is being planned for April 21 and arrangements for a guest speaker.

FL Club Plans Breakfast

Thirteen members of Salem F. L. Club of the Rebekah Lodge met at the home of Mrs. Larry Scheelar Jr., 2320 Shelton, on Thursday evening for their regular monthly meeting. Co-hostess was Mrs. Lawrence McClure.

ADVERTISING PROMOTES GROWTH

All business . . . all progress . . . all growth is essentially a matter of bringing people together: Those who make things and those who use them, those who have things to sell and those who have money to spend, those who can do things and those who want things done.

Quickest, cheapest way to bring together maker and user, seller and buyer, do-er and wanter . . . is advertising.

Advertising lubricates the wheels of progress . . . keeps America moving ahead. Gives the manufacturer a larger market. Puts him into mass production. Brings down the cost of whatever he makes. Helps the retailer sell more goods for less money. Advertising helps every business to grow faster . . . helps everybody to live better!
