Both Big Toes Held as Celebrities Visit

With a firm hold on each big (and uninjured) toe, James Morrow, aged 5, faced the celebrities and the flash bulbs Sunday. Despite his afflictions, which he admitted were pretty much his own fault, young James was a bright spot on the tour of Salem General Hospital's new pediatric and obstetric wing. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray E. Morrow of 577 N. 23rd St., he's waiting to see whether he's going to get sympathy or chastisement from Sec. of Interior Douglas McKay and Milton Meyers, chairman of the Hospital's board, for his tales of woe. James was admitted Saturday for treatment of an ear, badly battered in a tangle with a bicycle. The fact that his arm was in a cast was traced to a previous engagement in which he tumbled from the garage
