Sonny Tufts Signs For Crusoe Cruise

By EVE STARR

HOLLYWOOD — TELETORIAL PREVIEW: Gigantic, grinning Sonny Tufts has signed on the dotted to do a series of 52 telefilms on the lonely life and adventurous times of the famous Robinson Crusoe. This makes us very happy for more tender aged televiewers who'll oggle it with glee no matter how the job turns out. As for ourselves we're reserving our opinion until we see how Sonny reacts dramatically to life on a desert isle.

Sonny Tufts was a puzzle to us from the first. He popped out into full stardom, teamed with such glittering names as Eleanor Holm in costly color motion pictures. Our closest scrutiny failed to perceive more than a large and rugged frame and a pleasant grin which closed a pair of rather small eyes. As for acting, it simply wasn't there.

• • •

Our final look, as we recall, was at Sonny as a grim-faced gangster who went down in a shower of lead but not down in history for the performance. In fact we'd begun to wonder whether those bullets and the slaughter were real because Sonny could have been dead and planted for all we saw or heard of him thereafter. Until now.

He certainly has the build that Robinson Crusoe should have had if he didn't, and the demands of adventurous plays like "Ramar of the Jungle" and westerns and the like are never very great on acting ability. So this new series could be highly interesting entertainment for the young fry. So could its production. We actually envy whoever goes along to handle the part of "Friday," especially if the series is shot in or near the original settings.

We recall with a great amount of pleasure a lengthy visit to this spot, the Island of Tabago in the West Indies, long before wartime activity permanently altered many adjacent and equally romantic gems like Port of Spain in Trinidad. If that's the destination of this budding new production, we'd love to join up and revisit the placid blue Caribbean and the spotless sands and emerald green of Tabago. Whether or not Sonny turns out a good performance there remains to be seen. He's certain to turn up a good time.

HOLLYWOOD — THE ALL AMERICAN GIRL: Kate Smith has a voice, a personality, and a fine variety on her daily show. Through the years that voice has remained a rich, effortless pleasure to listen to. She always comes up with a couple of numbers during her hour over NBC every afternoon except weekends. Her sparkling personality permeates the entire 60 minutes even though Kate herself claims but few. She's always just good, wholesome Katie, down to earth, leaning towards the average modest home when she's not actually on the rural path. Like her fashion show last Wednesday.

• • •

Dorothy Day runs the fashion department, once or twice a week. It's a review of the latest, but none of that $500 per gown stuff, worn today by the elite and carelessly tossed away tomorrow. None of those what-holds-it together Harper's Bazaar creations either. Dorothy's models show you what a workingman's wife is wearing, what a small business man's family can afford. Wednesday it included the small fry, this side of the teens, cute little prancers in clothes to match their mommy's. It was sweet, informative and entertaining.

A frequent attraction is the clever Alene Dalton, "The Story Princess," who acts out most of her fairy story, narrates it and has acting assistants when required. She's an able producer and talented actress rolled into one.

Large Families Popular Again

NEW YORK (INS)—The president of one of the country's leading women's college sees the return to large families and the return of the old-fashioned American home.

Mrs. Millicent McIntosh, president of Barnard College for Women at Columbia university, believes the nation's young adult population wants to return to the benefit of warm home relationships that were so often denied the "lost generation" after the first World War.

The gray-haired educator, herself the mother of five children, said:

"All the college students I know are anxious to have big families and willing to make financial sacrifices in order to do this. These youngsters are hungry for basic human relationships and reject the gadgets of modern living because they see they have not brought happiness to their own families."

'Rustlers' Steal Television Aerials

LOS ANGELES (INS) — Rustlers are at work once more in the heart of the Old West.

But this time they've changed their rustling tactics from cattle to expensive television antennas in the Hollywood Hills surrounding Los Angeles.

Arthur J. McGettrick, vice president of Admiral Distributors, Inc., reports several cases in which television set owners have complained of a pictureless tube, and a check by a technician revealed the costly hilltop aerial was missing.

"We haven't been able to figure out a solution," McGettrick said. "Residents in the hills may have to get together and set up a horse patrol or maybe we should call in Hopalong Cassidy to restore law and order."

MAKING INGOTS

WASHINGTON (INS)—One of the nation's newest steel mills, the huge plant along the Delaware river at Morrisville, Pa., is now making ingots from the first ore shipped from Cerro Bolivar, Venezuela.
