Brooks, Cards Lose; Sauer Hits No. 14

NEW YORK (AP) — President Eisenhower watched the Washington Senators make it two in a row over the New York Yankees, 7-3 Thursday as the world champions slipped to within one percentage point of fourth place in the American League.

The President cheered, drank soda pop and jumped up and down at the Red Cross benefit game in Washington in company with 21,763 other paying fans and 8,748 school children.

The Senators, unaccustomed to such weekday crowds, had home sponsored with a 10-hit attack that pinned the third straight loss on lefty Bob Kuzava.

Meanwhile, the fourth place Detroit Tigers crept up on the Yankees by whipping Baltimore, 7-1. It was the seventh consecutive defeat for the low-flying Orioles. Ned Garver and started seven hits in winning his first game in almost three weeks. The only Baltimore run was a home run by Bob Young in the second.

PHILS CLIMB
In the National League Philadelphia thumped Brooklyn 11-5 and moved over St. Louis into the first division as the Cardinals bowed to Chicago 7-3.

Only four games were played in the majors, all for a change, in daylight.

The Phillies battered five Brooklyn pitchers for 14 hits including home runs by Johnny Wyrostek, Earl Torgeson and Willie Jones. Brooklyn collected nine hits off Curt Simmons in the first 4-13 innings before Bob Miller replaced the left-hander and shut off the Dodger attack with a single safety rest of the way.

Hank Sauer climbed into a tie with Stan Musial in the National League home run race, hitting his 14th of the season. Ralph Kiner also homered as the Cubs pounded Gerry Staley and Stu Miller for a dozen hits. The loss was Staley's fifth.

Oak Knoll Women In Weekly Action

Women held their weekly tourney at Oak Knoll Golf Course Wednesday, with Mrs. Cliff Ellis taking low gross honors and Mrs. Wesley Sherman and Mrs. Dwayne Miller tying for laurels in the low net department. The final round of the women's annual Spring Tournament has been postponed until next week.

Top Driver Talent to Show ...

Midgets, 'Crash Derby' Bowl Fare Saturday Eve

The always-popular midget racers return to Hollywood Bowl Saturday night and the "dessert" on the program will be a climactic "destruction derby" involving six cars.

Once again some of the Northwest's top pilots are due for action in the Bowl. The card will include some 24 drivers. Half of the cars entered are Offenousers and they'll find plenty of competition from the Fords. In fact a Ford piloted by Dick Deahl beat the Offenousers in the initial midget program of the local '54 season.

Saturday night's time trials are scheduled for 7:45. The agenda will include the customary helmet dash and heat races in addition to Class A and Class B main events.

Some of the top thrills of local racing history have been provided by the tiny buggies, which are that much more maneuverable because of their size.

Promoter Ronny Ail's list of drivers for the card includes such familiar names as Jim Niday, Palmer Crowell, Larry Eastman, Bill Hyde, Lou Florence, Bob Gregg, Harold Sperr, Doug Berry, Bill Berry, Chuck Tontz, Jerry Lundquist, Jerry Watts, Jack O'Leary, Don Olds, Dick Mitchell, Dick Betz, Ken Peterson, Red Anderson, John Cooper, Gordy Youngstrom, Mel Anthony, Don Hood, Art Tush, Bob Christie, Mel McGaughy, Dick Deahl and Ben Spaulding.

Deahl, of course, will be seeking his second straight Hollywood Bowl midget main event win Saturday night.

Davey Decides To Quit Ring

CHICAGO (AP) — Chuck Davey, the one-time glamor boy pugilist of the TV screen, quit the ring Thursday to seek a career as radio and TV sportscaster.

The 29-year-old southpaw who holds a master's degree made the decision after taking a lopsided drubbing Wednesday night from Vince Martinez, up and coming Italian welterweight from New Jersey.

"If a fellow loses a fraction of a second, he's just one of the boys," Davey told a news conference in explaining his poor showing against Martinez.

It was the fourth loss in his last five matches for Davey, welterweight who scored a meteoric rise as a professional after a highly successful career as an amateur boxer at Michigan State College.

Davey, who used a constant jabbing right and a stiff left uppercut to win 40 of his 48 professional bouts, was thoroughly outclassed in his match with Martinez.

salmon were hooked without a single fish being brought to gaff. Quite a lot of fun. Bob Bartges of Aumsville took over three hours on one salmon using spinning tackle. That begins to run into work.

Fly fishing on the Deschutes has been in the good to excellent brackets for some time when the water is right. The week-end fouling up of the river still remains as the big drawback on the Deschutes river. Those anglers who find time to get away during the middle of the week report wonderful fishing.

Crecent creek and the Little Deschutes are still running across the meadows and the fishing is rather unpredictable. Wickiup is producing well and should be one of the hot spots over the week-end for big trout. There may not be as many in Wickiup as in other lakes but the fish are big and in excellent condition.

The coastal streams have fallen off in their productivity and chances are there will be little fishing there until late July when the sea-run cutthroat start coming in again. June however, will find a few chinook salmon coming into Yaquina bay and off Winchester. There will be something to keep the coast anglers busy.

Anglers Have Fair Luck on Santiam

Fly and spin fishermen on the Santiam river have been having fair luck during the afternoon on some of the riffles in the Stayton-Jefferson area. Fly fishing has been good on some of the water with a few fish running to fourteen inches. The Santiam is becoming more popular now that a more constant run-off is assured and the fish seem to be on the increase.

To get away from the angling for a moment may we point out that now is an excellent time of the year for the shotgunners to get in a little practice banging at crows. Valley quail and pheasant are now on the nest and the crow is having a field day with his thieving tactics. One single crow can clean out a nest in a single day. Multiply this by the thousands of crows in the Willamette valley and we have a fair picture of where lots of our game birds go.

While upland game birds have been sorely pressed by civilization and its accompanying hazards, the crow has gone on almost unmolested. He is a thieving black rascal and should be held in check. He also offers the gunner a good target to keep his eye in place.

WILLAMETTE VALLEY FARMER

News and Views of Farm and Garden --By LILLIE L. MADSEN

Angus Cattle Clean Up Pasture

Turkeys, which grazed the field pictured above, went to market Monday, and Tuesday these Aberdeen cattle were turned in to clean up the range before they are turned into the clover fields. "To get the most out of pastures, you just have to figure how to graze them," say H. B. Jorgenson and his son, Vincent, who farm east of Silverton. (Statesman Farm Photo.)

Twilight Time

By FARMER'S WIFE

It's a wee bit chilly yet—but the chairs are out on the back lawn beneath the apple trees—the tent caterpillars were all cut out this afternoon—and when I work hard enough pulling weeds out of the rose bed just as dusk falls, I can sit and rest a spell, before going in, without noting the cool east wind which should be blowing from the south, instead, to bring us rain.

But sitting and resting a spell always brings up a lot of chores that should be done "right now."

Included is the rhubarb, which should really have been done last week. But I noted today mine is still crisp. In February, we put a lot of old decayed straw around the spot where the plants were just looking as if they'd break through the ground. On top of the straw we put some commercial fertilizer, heavy in nitrogen and superphosphate. It worked. The rhubarb has never been better.

I don't mind putting it up, either—not the way I do it now. I remember as a youngster it was quite a chore because we canned it then. Now we just cut it up in cooking size—after washing it—and put it into the little cellophane paper bags dry—no sugar, no water—and dump it into the deep freezer.

When we fix it for cooking—the Farmer likes stewed rhubarb better than anything—we dumped it into the stew pan, frozen, added a half cup of water to a quart of the fruit and a cup of sugar. It's just like fresh.

We used to put it in water in the deep freeze, but we find we like it better put in dry.

There sure are a lot of chores around the farm—but I like them better than lots of things town women do in the afternoons—the county agent told me today that the pea weevils are crawling out of their winter hibernation. That means that I got to get dust on my garden peas, pronto. He said to dust just as the first pods appear. Well they've appeared, but there are more coming. Maybe by dusting some about 6 o'clock tomorrow morning, I'll get to the pods before the weevils do. He said I could use 5 per cent DDT dust, but I don't like DDT, so I'm going to use one of his other recommendations — 1 per cent rotenone dust or a 5 per cent methoxychlor dust. Luckily, I picked up some at the garden store this morning. I knew this pea weevil business with its dusting was just around the clock. I remember last year, I dusted every Friday until the peas were used, and nary a weevil did we find . . .

I remember the first time I saw the weevils, or even knew they were in peas . . . When we were kids we didn't have all these insect and pests here in the Willamette Valley . . . But to get back to the weevils which we do have now in droves: It wasn't a pretty picture, and I couldn't eat peas (my favorite vegetable) for sometime afterwards. But the peas were cooking nicely in the hot water—on top of which were floating these weevils. No more peas on the table that year, mother said . . . But you'll find the same thing now if you don't mind the county agent's dust — only you'll have more now than we did then.

Army Atomics Turn to Meat Preservations

Meat that will keep almost indefinitely with no appreciable heat involved, is the result of experiments being conducted at the food technology department at Oregon State College.

The experiment has grown out of the finding that some foods used by the military lose flavor, nutritional value and appeal when they are canned or dehydrated.

The two grants for studying irradiated meats are $22,500 to the food technology department for 18 months, and $14,600 to the agricultural chemistry department for 12 months.

The two departments are concentrating on flavor and color effects in meat that has been irradiated by radioactive materials.

Edward C. Buhl, assistant chemist in the department of agricultural chemistry, said much work has been done with off-flavors of foods sterilized by accelerators, X-rays and low intensity fission sources. However, he knows of no other work done on materials treated by fission product waste of very high intensity.

He will be attempting to pin down what part of the meat develops off-flavors—such as protein or carbohydrate—and whether a compound such as vitamin C might lower these changes.

R. F. Cain, associate food technologist is heading the other part of the study. Irradiation of meat is being considered as a way to preserve it and yet keep the appearance, taste and food of raw meat. Many different cuts of beef and pork are to be used in the experiments.

Neuberger Planning Speeches at Baker

BAKER (AP) — Richard L. Neuberger, Democratic nominee for U.S. senator, will be here next Tuesday for talks.

He will address a Young Democrats banquet in the evening and is tentatively scheduled to speak at a Kiwanis Club luncheon at noon.

Hop Market Termed Quiet

Pacific Coast hop markets remained rather quiet during May with prices barely unchanged from the previous month, a report from the USDA released Thursday indicated.

Trading was slow and scattered with inquiry confined to limited quantities of seedless hops for future delivery. Demand was generally quite slow for 1954 crop hops, but offerings by growers appeared to be tight reflecting that prospective supplies not already contracted are in firmer hands.
