Valley Shows Draw Lamb Raisers Today

By LILLIE L. MADSEN
Farm Editor, The Statesman
With attention focused this week-end on lamb shows, the spring lamb showed a little price decline. The salable supplies of sheep and lambs continued to gain at Portland but this is seasonal, the USDA said Friday as the week's livestock market closed.

Lamb growers are taking out time Saturday to attend both the Rickreall show and the Scio Show. Saturday. Next Saturday they will go to Turner for the Marion County Show.

Price discussion is expected to be one of the ring-side features at all of these shows. Spring lamb prices compared to a year ago are somewhat lower. At Portland around $2 to $3 compared to last year at this time. Some of the midwestern markets are also sharply down compared to last year. Friday's USDA reports show quotations at various markets Friday ranged around $1 to as much as $3.50 lower than last year at this time.

Eastward, spring lamb prices at most of the markets closed lower Friday than a week ago. Some markets proved a little irregular. In California, spring lamb prices had worked lower also. At San Francisco, price drops this week were around 50 cents to $1.

Some contracting for spring lamb by delivery later this season was reported during the week just closing. In eastern Oregon, around 6,000 spring lambs were delivered for late July and August delivery. The price was $19 a hundredweight with some cut out at $17.50.

The wool markets continued to show firmer prices. Some activity was also reported this past week in Oregon wool selling. The USDA reported wool trading "active" in the Willamette Valley where prices strengthened around 3 cents a pound compared to previous quotations. Buying was reported at 54 to 55 cents a pound on a grease basis. In eastern Oregon, one large clip brought 55 1/2 cents a pound in the grease.

The final wool sale of the season in New Zealand this week closed strong. Quotations were 2 to 3 cents above the previous sale.

To FEP Conference
W. E. Van Meter, fair employment practices director in the State Bureau of Labor, left by plane Friday to attend a three-day conference of the Commissions Against Discrimination in Philadelphia. The conference is held annually by representatives of states and cities with anti-discrimination laws to consider factors influencing intergroup relations.

Appointed

WASHINGTON—Carl Hogg (top) and Robert Paulus (bottom), Salem, Ore., businessmen, were appointed Friday to the National Board of Field Advisers by the Small Business Administration. Rep. Walter Norblad disclosed.

Food Coupon Removal Hit

Grocery store operators who take coupons out of packaged food got another stiff warning Friday from O. K. Beals, chief of foods and dairies for the State Agricultural Department.

Beals said he has received several complaints that grocers are opening food packages in their stores to remove the coupons.

"Housewives don't appreciate having clerks of others open a food product to remove the coupon. Such a practice carries with it a chance of contamination," Beals said.

Beals said that if a buyer wants a coupon removed from a package, the buyer should be made to remove it himself.

Beals doesn't care if coupons are removed from soap packages, or others containing non-food products.

Welfare Office To Move to New Quarters

Marion County welfare department will move next week into new, temporary quarters at 147 N. Liberty St., above Bishop's Clothing Store, it was announced Friday.

Director Kenneth Peterson said the office will occupy these temporary quarters during the month of June. The welfare department then plans to move into a permanent new home being constructed at 460 S. Church St. at state expense at the end of June.

The move from present quarters in the old school administration office building on North Church St. will take place Tuesday, June 1. The welfare office will be open for business at the Liberty Street address on Wednesday morning.

The public will continue to be served at the old quarters by a skeleton staff during moving operations Tuesday, Peterson said. The school office building is to be wrecked beginning next week to make way for construction of a large Meier & Frank store building on that block.

Rates Raised On County's Juvenile Care

For the privilege of boarding juveniles at the Multnomah County Detention for Delinquent Children Marion County will begin paying July 1, have to pay $4 per day per child instead of the current $2.

This information to Marion County Court was contained in a letter Friday from the Multnomah County Board of Commissioners.

The letter also indicated the Multnomah County authorities were not sure how much longer it can accept children from Marion County for the Home.

However, the reason given for the fee increase is that the home is not now operating at capacity and that a considerable amount of its workers' time is spent in meeting both the emotional and physical needs of the children.

Cost to board a child at the Home was reckoned at from $5.00 to $7.43 per child per day. Marion County has been sending some juveniles to the Portland home.

Glath Retires From State Forestry Post

Joe E. Glath, superintendent of the state forestry shops for 15 years, will retire Tuesday.

Glath was born 70 years ago in Alsace-Lorraine, and served in the German navy for nine years. After spending some time in China, his naval service ended when his ship was in San Francisco.

While visiting relatives in San Francisco, Glath met Carl Gerlinger, master mechanic for the Willamette Valley Lumber Co. at Dallas, Gerlinger brought Glath to the Salem, Falls City and Western railroad.

Glath started the Dallas Iron Works, selling out to Gerlinger in 1919. Later he went to Klamath Falls as manager of Gerlinger's Klamath Falls Iron and Steel Works.

Glath was married in Dallas in 1912 to a girl who also was a native of Alsace-Lorraine. They hadn't met before they moved to Dallas.
