Detroit Dam Concrete Plant Being Moved

A huge concrete-mixing plant, used in the construction of Detroit and Big Cliff dams on the North Santiam River, is being installed for use at The Dalles damsite on the Columbia River.

The former "batch" plant at The Dalles collapsed several days ago. The new plant was purchased from Consolidated Builders, contractors for the Santiam River dams. It is larger than the one which collapsed and will increase production of concrete at The Dalles by one-third.

Crews are working around the clock in an effort to have the new mixing plant in operation by July 1, Army engineers said.
