

Miss Nieswander Married to Donald Sepich at Church Rites

Exchanging their vows at an 8 o'clock ceremony Saturday night at the First Congregational Church were Miss Shirley Eulalia Nieswander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul S. Nieswander, and Donald Joseph Sepich, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sepich of Cutten, Calif.

It was at 8 o'clock that Dr. Brooks Moore performed the rites before a setting of all white gladioluses. The alternate pews were marked with tall, white tapers entwined with ivy and tied with a white bow. Miss Coralie Doughton was the soloist and Mrs. Lewis Mitchell was the organist. Lighting the candles were Miss Lenore Nieswander, a cousin, and Miss Nancy Taylor.

Of Chantilly lace and net over satin was the bridal gown, designed with a fitted lace bodice and net skirt over satin terminating in a court train. The skirt was enhanced with wide lace panels in front and back extending into the train. Her French illusion veil was caught to a Chantilly lace cap trimmed in seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white rosebuds centered with a white orchid.

Attendants Wear Green
Four attendants, wearing ice green organdie dresses, walked before the bride. Mrs. Wilson Wilt Jr. was the matron of honor and Mrs. Paul S. Nieswander Jr. of Tacoma, sister-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Gerald Evanson of Seattle, and Miss Carol McLeod were the bridesmaids. The dresses were made with deep borders of embroidery with matching stoles of the embroidered organdie. They carried baskets of white gladioluses in a cascade effect. Susan Nieswander was flower girl for her cousin.

Richard McCorkie of Eagle Point stood with the groom as best man. Seating the guests were Paul S. Nieswander Jr. of Tacoma, Richard Duncan of Lebanon, and Richard Montag of Portland.

The bride's two attendants were Mrs. Mark Peter Miller, Florence Inglis of Beaverton, sister of the groom, who flew east with her husband for the wedding, and Miss Carolyn P. Kelley of Manhasset, Long Island, N. Y. They wore ice pink Italian silk shantung bouffant ballerina gowns with matching hats. They carried bouquets of deep red cabbage roses.

Father Best Man
James A. Inglis stood with his son as best man. Ushers were Walter H. May, cousin of the bride, and August Miale Jr., classmate of the groom, both of Rochester.

Mrs. Uebel selected a grey silk taffeta afternoon gown with corsage of green cymbidium orchids for the wedding. Mrs. Inglis chose a beige lace afternoon gown to which she pinned a corsage of brown cymbidium orchids for her son's marriage.

A wedding reception was held at the Rochester Club following the high noon rites.

The newlyweds are driving west by way of Banff and Lake Louise on their honeymoon. For traveling the new Mrs. Inglis changed to a cypress green Italian silk shantung suit with beige Italian silk shantung pillbox hat.

The couple will spend the summer in Dallas and in the fall will return to Rochester to reside, where Mr. Inglis will resume his studies at the University of Rochester School of Medicine.
