

"COMES the Dawn" in the Conrad Prange family, and five little Pranges are ready for an active day. Offer of victuals doesn't even awaken little Elizabeth. Her admirers left to right are Virginia, Margaret, Michael and Helen.

THOUGH father Thomas G. Wright is the minority in his household of girls, he is pretty popular when he reads to Suzanne, Patricia and baby Sarah. Mr. Wright is a staff writer for The Statesman.

Acres of Diamonds....

You remember the story, about the man who looked all over the world for wealth and finally found diamonds in his own dooryard. For years we have printed pictures of fathers on this special day, but this year went into our own newsroom for the finest collection of fathers and the prettiest offspring anyone would ever want to see. It's a mighty-good percentage too, if one wants to delve into statistics. (All photos by John Ericksen, Statesman Staff Photographer).

CRITIQUE extraordinary, Becky, gives the expert's eye to one of father Jerry Stone's paintings. He is a staff writer on The Statesman.

CITY Editor Robert E. Gangware and daughter, Cora, discuss the merits of the various flowers found in their arden.

THERE is music in the air, but not all Irish, when Charles Ireland, valley editor, plays for his children, Bonnie, and twins, David and Diane. As is indicated by their interest, all are musical.

BACK yard of the J. Wesley Sullivan home is a lively place when Nancy, Bill, David and Steven play. Mr. Sullivan, Statesman news editor, helps the younger ones on the rocking boat.

I F Daddy qualifies as a batter, the Al Lightner family can boast a One o' Cat team. Young Alan is catcher for little JoAnne's pitching. Mr. Lightner is sports editor of The Statesman.