Labor Rifts Increase State Job Seekers

The current 6,300 increase in the number of job seekers in Oregon was attributed to labor disputes and a late season in a statement issued by the State Unemployment Compensation Commission here Thursday.

Approximately 38,900 persons were actively seeking work at the midyear as compared with 32,600 on June 1 and 25,500 a year ago. Only 820 unfilled job openings were counted by local office representatives as of July 1, which was the lowest number at this period since the end of the war.

Approximately 3,400 of the new job seekers were among those out of work as a result of the dispute between lumber operators and employees. Several state employment offices in the heart of the timber belt reported few of the strikers asking for agricultural and other temporary work, but most of those laid off as an indirect result of the strike were in the labor market. The entire unemployment situation was expected to be clarified in the next week or two, officials said.

Eastern Oregon areas were affected but little by the tie-up in the fir lumber industry. The Dalles, La Grande, Baker and Milton-Freewater reported many persons finding jobs in agriculture and industry, while Hillsboro and McMinnville made the best showing in the western part of the state. The Portland area had nearly 50 per cent more job seekers than a year ago.

New and transitional claims received from insured workers as a preliminary to the 1954-55 benefit year which started this month are the highest since the change-over to the mid-year benefit year was made in 1947. More than 20,000 persons will have claims on record when first requests for compensation are possible July 12, it was predicted.

In the benefit year now closing continued claims have been running about 12,000 a week since mid-May, well above recent comparable periods but reduced considerably by the 19,000 who exhausted their 1953-54 benefit rights.

New Westside Water Group Incorporates

The College Heights Water Association Cooperative filed articles of incorporation Thursday with the state corporation commission. Listed were $50,000 in common stock and $50,000 in preferred stock.

S. H. Kellicott, chairman of the association's board of directors, said the cooperative is in conjunction with the College Heights Water District approved recently by voters.

The board has called for bids on a water distribution project which will serve some 35 homes in West Salem and a contract should be let within a week, Kellicott explained. Construction is expected to start immediately afterward, he added, and will cost in excess of $16,000.

Voters of the district had approved a $30,000 bond issue but investigation revealed water rates would be excessive in order to retire the bond issue, Kellicott said. A cooperative plan of selling memberships in the association was thought to be the best method of financing the project, he added.

County Told to Watch Pacts If More Highway Money Offered

Marion County shouldn't rush into any agreements if more federal highway money is offered to it, Commissioner Ed L. Rogers said Thursday.

Discussing an announcement from the State Highway Department that Oregon's share of federal highway money next year would be more than $4,000,000 higher than in the preceding year, Rogers said that the qualifications attached to federal highway money are rough on the counties that get the funds.

"The county has to put up 20 per cent of the total amount," Rogers said. "The federal government has specifications for the highways that make them more expensive than the roads we build for ourselves."

As an example, he estimated that the county spends an average of about $5,000 a mile to get roads widened. Under federal specifications, he said, the work may cost as much as $28,000 a mile.

The highway department announced the increase in federal highway aid Wednesday. Rogers said the county court hadn't been officially notified of the new amount.

"My guess would be that the county might be offered up to $200,000 of the money," he said. "$354,000 to spend."

An earlier letter from the highway department estimated that Marion County would have about $354,000 to spend on its roads during the next two fiscal years. The estimate was based on the assumption that federal aid would remain at its previous level.

After receiving the letter last week, the court instructed County Engineer Heda Swart to work on recommendations for using the highway money.

Rogers said that Marion County maintains 1,400 miles of roads—"enough to reach beyond Los Angeles if they were straightened out." More than 500 miles have oiled surface.

Convict Awaits Verdict on Suit For Freedom

Bernard L. Alexander, convicted of burglary last year, waits in the Oregon State Prison today while Marion County Circuit Judge George Duncan considers the legal arguments that Alexander hopes will bring about his release.

Alexander's habeas corpus suit against Warden Clarence T. Gladden was presented in court Wednesday by Salem attorney Steve Anderson. After the hearing, Judge Duncan remanded Alexander to the warden's custody while he took the case under advisement.

The prisoner pleaded guilty to a burglary charge in January, 1953. He was sentenced to five years in prison from the Eighth Circuit Court, which was in session in Bend, Deschutes County. The burglary was committed in Madras, which is in Jefferson County.

The appeal from the sentence is based on a 1947 Oregon statute which gives a judge the right to accept a plea of guilty in a county other than the one in which the offense was committed. The law says this can be done "upon written request" of the accused and his attorney.

Alexander maintains that neither he nor his attorney signed such a request, and that the court therefore acted improperly in sentencing him.

WU Professor Thrilled by Flight in Jet
Dr. Howard W. Runkel, professor of speech at Willamette University, returned Thursday from McChord Air Force Base, Wash., where he was Willamette's representative to the AROTC summer encampment.
Some 24 students from Willamette are attending the summer training session there which will conclude July 17.
While at McChord Dr. Runkel toured the base and the Boeing Aircraft plant in Seattle. He also was given a ride in an Air Force T33 jet trainer. "After speeds up to 505 miles an hour," he declared, "my Ford seems mighty slow."

WEED FIGHT CONTINUES
Continuation of the tansy ragwort eradication program was announced Thursday by the State Forestry Department. Hoses reaching 250 feet on each side of forest roads are used to spread the spray which kills the weed.

Jack D. Ballah, 26, of Portland, began work this week as a juvenile counselor for Marion County Circuit Court. He is a recent graduate of Lewis and Clark College in Portland.

Public Service Forum Elects New President

Carlisle Roberts, chief counsel for the State Tax Commission, was elected president of the Public Service Forum by the board of directors at its meeting Wednesday evening.

Roberts, who is a graduate of Harvard Law School, engaged in the private practice of law until he joined the Tax Commission as an attorney seven years ago.

Robert Sandstrom, administrative officer for the Civil Defense Agency was elected vice president; David Cameron, head of the contributions division of the Unemployment Compensation Commission, treasurer, and Floyd Colburn, manager of the Salem office of Remington Rand, secretary.

The Public Service Forum, organized four years ago, consists of approximately 100 executive, supervisory, and technical state employees. Gene Huntley, personnel director for the State Highway Department, is retiring president.

Arrests Increase At Harvest Time

Harvest time in the Salem area has brought an increase in the number of drunkenness and vagrancy arrests in Salem, police reported Thursday.

During the day nine men were lodged in jail on drunkenness charges and two were picked up for vagrancy, according to police reports. Most of the offenders are middle-aged transients who regularly follow the crop harvest, officers explained.

Meet Weighs Plan to Expand Pay Deductions

Plans to expand the employe payroll deduction plan into all Salem industries for the United Fund drive next fall were discussed at a meeting of the Salem Labor-Management Committee Thursday noon at the Marion Hotel.

"A program whereby an employe agrees to permit deduction of a certain portion of his pay check each month or week," said W. E. Kimsey, chairman, "is the best method of collecting funds. It is easier on the employe and increases contributions."

"We attempted to start this program in Salem several years ago for the Community Chest drive. Two plants, Blue Lake Packers and Paulus Bros., adopted it. Since then each year's employe contributions at those plants have nearly doubled the previous year's collections."

Kimsey said the Labor-Management committee intends to arrange meetings with representatives of Salem industries, especially those in the building contractor trade, for the purpose of discussing payroll deduction plans for their operations.
