Arriving with Howell were Vince Lombardi, former Army assistant coach who will be charged with the attack, and Bill Swiacki, famous pass-catcher of Columbia, the Giants, and the world champion Detroit Lions.

The three coaches wasted no time after arriving at their head-quarters in WU's Baxter Hall. They immediately went into a huddle in their rooms and started working out patterns of plays and practice schedules.

Howell reported that a few of the players had already moved into Salem with the majority to arrive late Saturday night and the remainder coming in sometime Sunday. Two air flights carried players into Portland late Saturday night and were immediately transported to waiting chartered buses for the trip to Salem.
