

By DON HARGER

Elton "Bud" Lafky, Willamette U law student who resides out on North 21st St. dropped by to show us a pair of beautiful rainbow taken from Marion lake. The pair of beauties hit the tape at 19 inches and weighed three pounds a fish. Both fish were caught on single eggs and light leader.

Nearly all of the fish we've seen this year from Marion lake have been fatter than butterballs. Too, they show the rapid growth of fish for-tunate to have a full diet. It is no secret (at least to the fish) that Marion lake is one of the richest in food life of any of Oregon's lakes.

Three pound fish from that body of water are fat and carry the small head that shows rapid growth and is so becoming the red striped rainbow. Too bad that Oregon has so few lakes where the fish grow so big in such a short time.

The Williamson river down near Chiloquin is getting hotter than the midwest for rainbow trout. One catch we heard of last week ran from 3 to 6 pounds. All were taken on light spinning lures and afforded plenty of fun for the lucky anglers.

One of the best spots to cast a lure for the big Williamson rainbow is right at the little state park where Spring river joins the Williamson. The Williamson carries a tea colored water while the Spring flows as clear as bottled water. A lure cast into the dark water and allowed to swing around into the clear water will nearly always produce a strike. Don't be surprised however, if you should turn up with a five or six pound mullet.

Usually at this time of year there are numerous underground umors sifting in from the coastal streams that the sea-run cutthroat are in. In most cases one may not expect the choice sea-run cut to come in from the salt until late July or early August. This year seems to be an exception. Too many rumors have come wafting in to allow us to continue turning our deaf ear. We did a little Surprising enough one can be confident of a fair catch of blueback (sea-run cutthroat) in the Alsea, Siletz, and Nehalem rivers. We must admit that this situation may be short lived and may die three times in succession. out quickly. On the other hand it may improve with each passing day until the runs have gone on up into fresh water.

The Sea-Run Show Plenty of Fight

The sea-run is one of our choice food fish and is by no means on the bottom of the list as a scrapper. No fish will take to the air more readily and throw more water. No fish offers a more tender mouth when fresh in from the sea. The sea-run takes a light touch and skillful handling lest the hook be torn from the mouth

Light spinning tackle and/or fly fishing are two of the most sporty methods of taking the silvery and graceful fish. They hit a weighted streamer fly well, especially in the evening and they come well to a small spinning lure.

Don't limit your fly or spin fishing to the fresh water areas either. You will be surprised how many fish can be taken from tide water by casting a weighted fly back in under the overhanging trees along the banks. Two anglers work well here as rowing is much the better method of moving up or down stream. One may row while the other fishes. Of course this is a turn-about deal. From now on through August and early September, the coastal streams will offer much in the way of fishing.

Trabert Falls Before Bartzen At Clay Court

CHICAGO (A) - Bernard Bartzen, of San Angelo, Tex., defeated Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, Ohio, 6-2, 4-6, 6-0, 6-2, Sunday to win the National Clay Courts singles tennis championship at the River Forest Tennis Club.

It was the first major singles tournament triumph for the 26year-old Bartzen, a sporting goods salesman. Travert was seeded No. 1 in the tourney and favored to win. Bartzen, ranked 7th nationally, was seeded No. 4.

Bartzen, who has been playing tennis steadily for about two years, shared the National Clay Courts doubles title last year with Grant Golden of Wilmette, Ill. Earlier, Maureen (Little Mo)

Connolly of San Diego successfully defended her Clay Courts singles title by overpowering Doris Hart of Coral Gables, Fla., 6-3, 6-1. In the Bartzen-Travert duel the first set was hard fought, although Bartzen gave the crowd a foretaste of his impending upset tri-umph by breaking Trabert's initial Bartzen ran up a 3-1 lead then dropped Trabert's service in the bert's serve.

In the second set, Trabert turned on all his power, relying on his ditioning gives the NFL boy fast serve and moving into the net at every opportunity. Tony took a league openers on Sept. 26. Scat-4-1 lead, but Bartzen evened the tered through the training schedcourt at 4-all. Trabert then hammered out the next two games, losing only three points. Trabert obviously tired in the third set, losing his own serve on July 31.

In the final set Bartzen won the first two games. Trabert then rallied to make the count 2-all, but Bartzen had little trouble taking the final four games, again with the loss of only three points.

Bartzen, a left-hander, relied on his steady ground strokes and frequently caught Trabert flat-footed with carefully placed drives when Tony took the net.

Described by observers as "the most improved player in the tournament," Bartzen played the same kind of defensive game that enabled him to defeat second-seeded Vic Seixas of Philadlphia on Fri-

Battle Royal Ends Tilt Between Phils, Cards

ST. LOUIS (A) - Rival managers Terry Moore and Eddie Stanky, enemies since Moore's ouster as a Cardinal coach, were in the thick of a free-for-all in the second game of a doubleheader which the Philadelphia Phillies swept from the St. Louis Cardinals

The rhubarb developed in the fifth inning only a few minutes before plate umpire Babe Pinelli ordered the game forfeited to the Phillies, 9-0 because of delaying tactics of the Cards. The Phils won the opener, 11-10, on Bobby Morgan's 10th inning single.
