

Scarcity of Women Chief Gripe Of Men at Greenland Air Base

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Betty Scheibl, of the San Antonio (Texas) Light, recently flew to Thule, Greenland, America's northern air base, to see what life was like for the GI's there. The article that follows is culled from her reports to her newspaper.)

By BETTY SCHEIBL

THULE, Greenland (INS)—Life has its little disappointments and Thule Air Base, America's northernmost defense outpost, undeniably is one of them.

For one thing, the sun does not rise here at midnight. No, indeed, it doesn't, and I'll donate the loan of my best parka plus a month's rations of Eskimo Pie to anybody desirous of disproving that statement.

From my viewpoint anyway, which until a short time ago was from an altitude of 9,500 feet, the sun makes its first appearance about 8 p.m.—reddening the distant horizon that separates ice from atmosphere on frozen Baffin Bay.

We Arctic explorers, 24 of us, saw this phenomenon about five hours south of Thule, and after our MATS C-54 Skymaster had been cruising along at about 200 mph for some three hours over the vast white prairie of the bay, "Our" sun began to come up before we had quite used up the daylight we started out with that morning at Westover AFB, Mass.

Aluminum City
The trip from Westover north is a numbing adventure that lasts almost 14 hours, with a two-hour layover for crew change in Goose Bay, Labrador.

When nine construction workers, 14 military passengers, the six-man crew and I stumbled wearily off the plane at the end of the trip, we saw a gleaming aluminum city nestled between low hills of snow, a frozen harbor on one side and the high plateau of the icecap in the distance.

Thule literally means the end of the earth, the farthest limit possible, and it's pronounced to rhyme with "Truly," Thule Air Base, truly, is even farther away than the name implies.

But for modernity, warmth and solid comfort the insulated aluminum buildings up here—all one-story inverted "iceboxes" on stilts—are unbeatable. No hospital is more up-to-date than Thule's sparsely, 50-bedder; few gyms offer as many facilities; three basketball courts, eight bowling lanes, two boxing rings, handball courts, sun-lamps, weight-lifting facilities and even a golf driving range.

The glamorous new officers' club, opened in March after $35,000 worth of decorating, and the NCO club are the pride of their respective members who, incidentally, bear the entire cost of supporting them.

The hobby shop attracts hundreds who whistle, saw and paint in the interest of something called Barracks Beautification. Courses offered by the University of Maryland and chapel services are well-attended, the movies for enlisted men and officers change every night.

Need Women
In fact, there's hardly an activity a reasonable man could desire, from chess to football to hiking in the snow, that can't be found at Thule.

The main trouble, as I see it, is that these men are not at all reasonable. They think they need more women!

The only women on the Thule Air Base are four comely nurses. Four fair females against 4,000 men besieged on every hand with invitations, showered with chivalry, positively overcome with consideration. Goodness, what a durance vile.

And what valor it takes to endure it. However, with the exception of Lt. Helena Marie Costa, of Rosindale, Mass., the girls are meeting the exacting demands of this last frontier with fortitude. Helen has gone and gotten engaged—to Lt. Bill Madden of B Battery, 549th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion, dug in atop of Thule's neighboring hills and thereby established a rather "northernmost" record; the first betrothal ever to be announced at Thule.

The wedding bells will not take place till October, after Helen and Bill, a native of Clinton, S. C., have rotated back to the States. The tour of duty for Helen and two other nurses, Captain Marie Schadt and Lt. Chris Steven, ends

Stock Market Hits Another New Pinnacle

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market banged out another new high Thursday in a strong advance topped by soaring prices for steels. Gains went to between 1 and 4 points in many cases, and they were fairly well distributed throughout the list.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained $1.00 at 131.30, highest point for the average since Oct. 22, 1929. The Associated Press average is 20 cents above the high of a week ago.

The industrial component of the average was up $1.60, railroads gained 70 cents, and the utilities were up 30 cents at a new high of $63.30.

The market was broad with 1,200 shares traded altogether of which 600 advanced and 267 declined with 163 new highs and 2 new lows for the year registered during the day.

Volume expanded to 2,800,000 shares, second highest day of the year topped only by the 3,000,000 shares traded July 15.
