

By DON HARGER For several seasons now this department has been asked fre-ently, "How come the sportsmen never have any advance infor-tion on what the waterfowl regulations will be?"

Our good friend and chief, Charles A. Sprague was most thoughtful recently when he saw to it that the following information fell into our hands. It comes in the way of an Oregon AP News Desk Log release and cencerns the recent "closed" meeting of the Pacific Flyway Council held in Klamath Falls. According to David W. Eyre of the Portland Oregon Journal who is chairman of the Oregon AP Freedom of Information Committee, the following incident took place at K. Falls. To quote Mr. Eyre: "On July 19 Bill Jenkins, managing editor of the Klamath Falls Heriald & News, wrote to P. W. Schneider, director of the Oregon State Game Commission, complaining about closed sessions of the Pacific Flyway Council, held in Klamath Falls."

Further quote: "We have now seen a copy of Mr. Schneider's reply to Jenkins. It devotes considerable space explaining how the council tried mightily to reach newspaper people with a prepared handout after the Flyway session had ended."

Jenkins didn't want a handout. He wanted to have on the spot knowledge of how the council reached its decisions. What were the arguments, the thinking processes? Here were state government agents, making their decisions in private.

Tom McAllister, well-informed outdoor writer of Portland interprets the bans as follows:

"The decision for a closed meeting was made by Ben Glading, head of game management operations of California: Glading (McAllister surmises) knew a most embarassing issue for the California has, through legislation, sanctioned feeding or baiting of migratory waterfowl on big gun clubs if licensed by the state. Federal rules, which should have precedent, forbid this type of baiting and this federal rule is enforced in all states but California." McAllister adds, — "a very smelly situation."

We Recognize 'Smelly Situation'

We Recognize 'Smelly Situation'

This column endorses the "smelly situation" as far as the Cal-ifornia management is concerned. We know of one (at least) duck absorbing property which was padlocked for part of last season be-cause of baiting. Of course that property was in Oregon and not in

There has been a large smoke-screen thrown up every year in the guise of crop depredations in California with the result last year that the season on wigeon was extended long after the regular closing date of duck season.

It would seem that it may well be time for waterfowlers of the northwest to ban together in a united league which might exert enough pressure to iron out the difficulties of this Pacific Flyway. Certainly we do not want to go back to the 3 duck bag limit with a certainly we do not want to go back to the 3 duck bag limit with a very short season such as we had not too many years ago. And—it could get even worse. We could end up with no waterfowl at all.

Sportsmen spend thousands of dollars each year in the way fo contributions to Ducks Unlimited to save the nesting grounds in the north. The idea is sound and it has saved our waterfowl. But what is wrong with a nation which spends money to have the waterfowl in the north while it tries desperately to get rid of them in the south in the winter feeding

The Locked Door Policy Must Go

What sort of hocus-poeus is being dealt out behind locked doors when the Flyway council meets to discuss what is to be done with the people's waterfowl. There can be and never will be any-thing but suspicion thrown on the secret meetings out of which come our seasons, bag limits, and other restrictions.

Will we go the way of the other three flyways? Will our waterfowl be raised in the north only to fly into a well prepared slaughterhouse in the south? Will the remainder of the refuges and resting areas be reclaimed for farming? These and other things may happen unless something is done and done now, before it is too late. We never saw a passenger pigeon. Wonder if our grand-children will ever see a mallard?

Prison Guards Outshoot Cops

A second straight victory was racked up by the Oregon State Penitentiary guards' pistol team
Wednesday when they outshot the Salem City Police by 132 points in a match held on the new OSP pistol range at the prison annex.

The five-man prison guard team averaged 279 points out of a possible 300, while the city police could hit only a 265 average.

It was the second victory in a 11 row for the guards, who recently outshot the Oregon State Police by 109 points in another match held at the prison range. Total points for the state police was 2516 and for the guards, 2625. Against the city police, the guards had 2790 and the law officers had

Kiser Brothers Get Rematch With Meanies

Another rousing wrestling card it the local armory next Tues night has been arranged with a rematch of the exciting Australian tag team match of last week. Jack and Dale Kiser, the fans' favorites, will again tangle with their more experienced foes, the "meanie" pair of Kurt von Poppenheim and Angelo Poffo.

Poffo, the big burly New Yerker, and his partner, the Proud Prussian, were burned up at being held to a draw by the Kiser Brothers in their last Tuesday match and demanded a rematch for a one hour time limit or a best two of three falls—and they also demanded a different ref-great showing of last week. Young Dale more than held up his end of the battle last week and the speed of the brother combination in the clutches was the deciding factor in the outcome.

A lot of hard feelings between the two teams developed during the match, which became so exciting as the time ran out that the crowd was on its feet and several of the fans had to be restrained from entering the fray.

The big meanles claim that they will mop up the mat with the Kisers with the longer limit. which last week went for only 45 minutes. Most fans fall in with the Kisers, however, and feel the brothers will give them a bad time of it.

Because of the disagreement over the refereeing, Owen hopes to have veteran Harry Elliot on hand to handle Tuesday's match. Remainder of the Tuesday gard will be announced later by

U. S. Girls Crush Britain's Hope of Keeping Curtis Cup

ARDMORE, Pa. (P)—Six steamed-up American girls crushed Britain's hopes of retaining the Curtis Cup Thursday when they scored decisive victories in the three opening foursomes matches of the two-day competition for the women's international golf trophy.
