Garden Editor, The Statesman
CORVALLIS—Plans were completed here this week-end for display of one of the nation's largest individual collections of chrysanthemum varieties for Oct. 2 and 3. This will be the sixth Corvallis-Oregon Early Chrysanthemum show and field day.

Sponsored jointly by Oregon State College horticultural department and the Corvallis Chrysanthemum Society, the annual weekend event attracts hundreds of flower lovers from throughout Oregon and adjoining states. Last year's attendance was more than 2,000.

The non-competitive show is free to the public and will be staged in the Roosevelt school, Highway 20 at 14th Street. Visitors may see exhibits from 1 to 9 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 2, and from 12 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 3. Plants in bloom of choice early varieties will be sold to defray expenses. This sale is held annually and most of the choice plants go early on both days. All amateur chrysanthemum growers, either individually or as organizations and groups, are invited to enter exhibits from 8 a.m. until noon on Oct. 2. No charge is being made for entry of exhibits.

State Turkey Growers Ask Free Market

Members of the Oregon Turkey Improvement association unanimously rejected a resolution asking for government help in eliminating the present surplus now in the hands of the industry. The action was taken at a Friday meeting at Corvallis.

The aid would have come through government buying for the school lunch program.

Reflecting the feelings of the group were remarks by association president, L. C. Jensen, Corvallis. In his opening address, he expressed the opinion that the industry would be better off "over a long pull" without government help.

Reluctant to Sell
Price supports and surplus removal programs create huge surpluses in government hands that depress the market and are difficult to get rid of, he said.

W. T. Geurts, Salem, in reviewing the current turkey market outlook, said turkey prices are 15 to 20 per cent lower than last year and at or very near the level of production costs. Because of this, growers are reluctant to sell and are storing a big percentage of turkeys, Geurts added.

Highly Specialized
The turkey industry is becoming more highly specialized, Noel Bennion, OSC extension poultry specialist, reported. This is shown by the fact that this year's national turkey crop is the largest on record although there has been a gradual reduction in the number of turkey growers, breeders, hatcheries and processors during the past 10 years.

Felix Wright, Silverton turkey grower, was elected new president, succeeding Jensen, who became a director. Bennion was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Directors re-elected were Loren Johnson, Scappoose; Harold Davis, McMinnville; Price Schroeder, Milwaukie; Walter Schwedler, Portland, and Carlos Johnson, Oregon City.

The broken package problem, according to O. K. Beals, chief of the foods and dairies division of the state agricultural department who registers these products, resulted from a desire of retail dealers to accommodate the public. Home gardeners and others seek to purchase small amounts of the products and to meet this demand some dealers break a properly labeled and identified package and sell small bulk lots in plain bags.

Beals said the purchaser knows what he is buying but the problem comes when the bag gets mixed up with other unmarked sacks in the home, basement, garage or storeroom. The agricultural department is advising all dealers that sales of these products out of broken packages must be labeled the same as the original package, including the original directions for use and warnings on health hazards.

"The department does not permit the sale of highly toxic insecticides in any form except in the manufacturer's original container," Beals averred.

The liaison committee also is helping to arrange educational programs for meetings and conferences slated through next March.

New Catholic School Rites Slated Sunday

Most Rev. Edward D. Howard, archbishop of the Portland Catholic diocese, will bless and dedicate the new Serra Catholic High School at Salem in public ceremonies on Sunday, Sept. 26.

The ceremonies will begin at 3 p.m. at the newly-erected school at Lancaster and D streets, according to the Rev. Kevin Murphy, OFM, principal.

Archbishop Howard will be the principal speaker. The general public is invited to attend the program and to tour the new buildings following it.

Construction of Serra High began last January. Future plans include an additional eight classrooms for boys, 16 classrooms for girls, a gymnasium a science and library building, an administration building containing a chapel and cafeteria and a sisters' convent.

Seventy-seven freshmen and sophomore boys are enrolled at the school now.

The school is named after Padre Junipero Serra, the great Franciscan missionary priest and first Christian educator on the West Coast. Padre Serra is honored in the nation's Hall of Fame and his canonization is currently being studied in Rome.

The school is administered by the Franciscan Fathers. Staff members include the Rev. Murphy; the Rev. John Francis, vice-principal; the Rev. Christian Mondor, registrar; the Rev. Lowell Blackburn, assistant pastor at St. Vincent de Paul parish; the Rev. Vincent Cunniff of St. Joseph's parish; Sister M. Francis Xavier and Sister M. Gerardine, both of the Franciscan Sister house at La Crosse, Wis. Leo Grosjacques is athletic coach.

Zone Change Consideration Due Tuesday

Salem Planning Commission Tuesday will consider a petition from William Bliven for a change of zone from apartment to light industrial classification for a lot on the east side of Winter St. between Trade and Mill Sts.

Bliven's lot is now divided between the R-4 (apartment) and M-1 (manufacturing) zones of that area. The lot is not improved.

Two variance applications also will be before the planners at their meeting in City Hall at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Both seek permission to build on property despite lot area which is not standard under the zoning code.

One of these petitioners is Realty Investment Co., for property on the southwest corner of S. Summer and Kumlser Sts. The other is F. O. Repine, at 380 S. 17th St.
