

State's Purchasing Office Has Large Shopping List For Institutions, Agencies

By THOMAS G. WRIGHT
Staff Writer, The Statesman

There's an awful lot of coffee in Brazil.

And there is an awful lot of coffee purchased annually by the state purchasing division for consumption by Oregon institutions and agencies.

In fact, the division buys some 115,000 pounds of whole bean and roasted coffee per year. Other items on the shopping list run something like this:

Sugar, 605,000 pounds.
Canned peaches, 4,115 cases.
Shoes (work), 2,464 pair.
Socks (work), 30,940 pair.
Automobiles, 458 complete.
Traffic paint, 80,000 gallons.
Lead pencils, 18,000 dozen.
Typewriters, 165.

Crackers (salted and graham), 2,400 cases.

Systematic and quantity buying, and some warehousing, hold the key to the streamlined look of Oregon's purchasing division, buyers of most of the state's needs.

For example, the state pays 96 cents a pound for its coffee. At the grocery store the price would run $1.07. The price includes delivery to the institutions, as needed to prevent oversized inventories.

New Building

Additional warehousing, which still offers room for limited savings in the purchasing program, will be available when the state Department of Finance and Administration moves into its new building, now under construction at 12th and Ferry streets near the Capital group.

The new structure, titled the Finance Building, will house the purchasing division on its main floor and provide warehouse space for some items in the basement. Completion of the $336,000 layout, first permanent home for the 3-year-old department, is scheduled for early next year.

false teeth, goggles, harrows, insecticides, jackhammers, kettles, lawn mowers, macaroni, nursery supplies, oleomargarine, parachutes, quarry rock, rabbits, shaving soap, tobacco, umbrellas, vegetable blinds, wallpaper, X-ray machines, yarn and zippers.

(Editor's note: This concludes a three-part series on activities of the Oregon Department of Finance and Administration.)
