The Mustangs, coached by Le-Roy Hughes and boasting 20 lettermen, are expected to field one of the strongest small-college grid outfits seen here in many years. Hughes can start eight of the 11 stalwarts who opened against Wil-lamette in last year's game in California, won by the Mustangs

Were it not that Quarterback Bob Neal was injured in Cal Poly's game with the San Diego Marines, and will be out of action today, the Mustangs would start an allveteran eleven against Coach Ted Ogdahl's Pony Express.

Otherwise the Mustangs are in act. Their all-veteran forward wall will average 206 pounds, and the backfield, led by the fabulous Perry Jeter, a 5-7, 184-pounder, will average 184 pounds.

In that front line are such performers as 205-pound Newt Wakeman, all three-year lettermen. Bob Heaston, 225-pound tackle, is the biggest of the linemen.

And what with 20 lettermen on hand, Hughes no doubt has adequate depth.

Ogdahl's club can't expect to compete with the Mustangs in either weight or experience. The Bearcat forward wall will average but 194 pounds, heftiest member of which is Andy George the 207-pound all-Northwest Conference guard who played a terrific game at Humboldt last week. The WU backfield of Harv Nef-fendorf, "Windy" Sequiera, Lou Lofland and George Bardsley will average only 161 with a full sweatup, and is worse off for weight when 141-pound Bobby Zoelch is in. But the speed of his mighty mites, along with Neffendorf's aerials are the items Ogdahl and University of Washington football the Bearcat backers are hoping will offset the Cal Poly beef.
