Memo from Mary

Hello—Just the right time to wish you all a very happy Thanksgiving Day. We all have so much to be grateful for just now—no wars, election is over and our economies didn't collapse, it looks like we'll all have turkey, and it's been predicted that we'll have the best Christmas, business-wise, ever. It all adds up to a grand finale for 1954!

Have been admiring my new shoji screen which will soon be installed in my studio on the mezzanine of our Court Street store. There are real butterflies and flowers pressed between the sheets of Philippine rice paper, then the sheets of paper are mounted between strips of mahogany for a lovely lattice effect. With a light shining behind the screen, the shoji panel has intriguing decorative value.

One person just in said "How effective this would be if it could slide on a track as a room divider." Little did he realize that just that can be done. The rice paper can even be put between layers of heavy plastic without destroying the airy and colorful effect, so that the panels could be installed in a bathroom window, but would be extremely effective in providing privacy and a most unusual window dressing. You probably have seen these in the new magazines used as panels with a light behind them, as a standing three or four panel screen, or as a room divider between a front hall and living room.

Just a word now about some new accessories to brighten up your home for the Thanksgiving festivities. How about using a pair of our new gold rosette sconces in your dining room? They hold from two to seven candles—we have a pair at home and we never fail to notice how much cheer and glamour the lighted candles and gleaming gold adds to the dining room. How about using one of our small lavabos in the front hall or on the dining room wall—they are so effective planted with greens and add personality to an otherwise blank wall—they are really a conversation piece.

Everyone loves a usable gift—and we have one for each of you. It's a pattern for scalloped cafe curtains. How many of you have sat down and tried to figure out just how deep and just how wide the scallops should be for your curtains, and have just quietly gone mad as a result? Well, those days are gone forever—come on down and pick up your cardboard pattern. It's a yard wide and is just right for either thirty-six inch or forty-eight inch materials.

See you next week.

Chairman of the hostess committee was Mrs. Denver Young, and assisting her during the evening were Mrs. John Muir, Mrs. Virgil Golden, Mrs. Joseph Paulson, Mrs. LaVerne Young, Mrs. Thomas Stacer, and Mrs. Fred Peters.

TECHNIQUE

For success in cake baking, sift flour carefully before measuring. Pile the sifted flour lightly into a measuring cup; use a spoon and do not pack down. Level off the flour with a spatula or straight-edged knife drawn across the top of the cup.

Mrs. Ted Carson, a new member, was introduced. Plans were discussed for the auxiliary to help out some needy persons during the Christmas season.

Mrs. William Newmyer, program chairman, introduced to the club Miss Reidien Iversen from Trondheim, Norway. Miss Iversen is an international exchange student sponsored by the American Field Service.

The Salem Lions are sponsoring Miss Iversen in Salem, and she makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Aschenbrenner. During the evening Miss Iversen gave an informal talk on Norway and on her own activities at home and in this country, also answering questions on her life in Norway and her impressions of the United States.

Don't Look Now...

but... we'll have to tell our favorite Thanksgiving story on a next door neighbor of long ago, who should have known better. Upon calling the meat man the day before Thanksgiving, the neighbor was told that turkeys were all gone but he had some nice capons. Indignantly she told him, (according to her own report) "I have yet to see the time when I have to serve fish for Thanksgiving."

Time and tide... watching the man dig gravel out of the river with his great big diesel shovel the first of the week, we wondered if he's still away down there since the rains brought old man Willamette away up. Was the man trying to make a channel we also wondered, or just down there practicing on his digger.

Problem traffic... If we were a judge and had the man who's responsible for arranging traffic lights in our court, we'd sentence him to six months doing nothing but trying to make two green lights on Center street without stopping.

Step right up folks... and avail yourselves of a fine opportunity. You can get the complete series of student plays at bargain prices. Three dramas for a fraction of what they'd cost you separately. Step this way, line forms at right. But, seriously, the Willamette University players are now selling their tickets to three winter plays, and we highly recommend that more townspeople go. They too should find them very well worth while. One's to be arena style, something that should interest those happy folks who saw the Pentacle Players perform last summer.
