Trust to Aid Long Study of Adams Family

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—Lyman H. Butterfield faces the task of reading more than 300,000 manuscript pages of public and private papers which reflect the actions, thought and feelings of four generations of the Adams family from pre-Revolutionary times through World War I.

Butterfield is director of the Institute of Early American History and Culture. Life magazine has granted $250,000 for the 15-year project he will head. Other sponsors are the Adams Manuscript Trust, the Massachusetts Historical Society and Harvard University.

Butterfield was associate editor of the papers of Thomas Jefferson. He is a graduate of Harvard and a native of Lyndonville, N. Y.

Links for the anchor chain of the super aircraft carrier Forrestal weigh 360 pounds each and the chain is strong enough to lift a small destroyer out of the water.
