Farmers Find They're Under Social Security

By LILLIE L. MADSEN
 Farm Editor, The Statesman

The federal social security law amendments passed by Congress in 1954 are still a puzzle to a number of farmers, according to more than a score of letters which the Statesman Farm editor has received this past week.

One farmer, in a final clause to his letter, admits the reason for this puzzlement: "Somehow I did not think it would affect me and so didn't pay any attention to the first information on it. Now it seems I'm in it, too," he wrote, when asking for further information.

Most of the inquiries settle around the same thoughts: Whom do the amendments affect? When do the new rules begin? How much do you have to make before you have to report?

Manning Becker, farm management specialist at Oregon State College, has been "given over" to assist farmers in understanding these new amendments. In reply to a request for a brief explanation, Becker gives the following, which I hope will answer most of the "first" inquiries:

Most farmers and farm workers in Oregon will be affected by the amendments. The law brings federal old-age and survivors' insurance to most farm families.

Over $400 Profits
 Beginning this month (January), persons who farm for themselves will be included in social security if they make as much as $400 a year profit from their farming operations. Farm workers are included if they are paid cash wages of $100 a year or more by any one farmer. Earnings of that amount on several different farms do not count. The $100 must be from one farmer.

Farm earnings may now count toward social security benefits for both farmers and their families. These benefits are in monthly payments in old age, and monthly payments to survivors in case of the breadwinner's death. A lump sum payment will also be made at the time of an insured person's death, at any age. This payment may range from $80 to $225.

After 1 1/2 Years
 Farmers must have worked under social security for at least 1 1/2 years before entitled to any of its benefits. These benefits are payable to a retired individual at age of 65 or to his survivors.

The benefits aren't paid automatically, however. It is necessary to claim them. Information on how to do this is available from local social security offices.

The first thing farm operators and workers should do now is to get social security cards if they don't already have them.

It's Compulsory
 Social security, like income tax, is compulsory. The farm operator has the dual responsibility of reporting his own earnings at the end of each year at the time he files his income tax return, and the wages he paid his farm employees.

Farmers are to pay 3 per cent social security on their net earnings from the farm. However, no tax is paid on earnings of over $4200 a year. To simplify reporting, a farmer is allowed to report on his gross income if this isn't over $1800. If his gross income is over $1800 during a year, he must report his actual net income. If the net income is less than $900 he may have the option of reporting $900.

The farm operator is required to withhold 2 per cent of each of his employees' pay up to $4200. He must match this amount, and make a report to the director of internal revenue showing the worker's name, social security number, and amount of wages paid him.

If there are any special questions it is advisable to check with your local social security offices. In each county, the county extension offices have information as to where the social security offices are.

Kansas City Star Solicitor Denies Refusing Ads
 KANSAS CITY (AP)—A former advertising solicitor for the Kansas City Star testified Tuesday he told advertisers they were wasting their money on ads in a competing newspaper.
 Neither he nor two other former solicitors testified they had refused space to advertisers who would not use the Star exclusively. This is charged by the government, which contends the Star and its advertising director, Emil Seest, used unfair advertising practices in an attempt to monopolize the dissemination of advertising and news in the Kansas City area. They are being tried in U.S. District Court on misdemeanor charges of violating the Sherman Antitrust Act.
 One former advertiser said Seest once told him if he didn't stop advertising in other publications the positions of his ads in the Star were going to get worse. Another testified that each time he placed advertising in other publications the fact was called to his attention by a representative of the Star.
LUCKY DAY
 CHESTERFIELD, N.H. (UP)—Neither of the two occupants was seriously injured when an automobile here went out of control, ripped out 10 guard-rail posts, somersaulted repeatedly, tore out utility lines, went down an embankment, landed on its roof and rolled over to halt on its wheels.
