Hoad Ousts Seixas From Tennis Tourney

ADELAIDE, Australia (A) America's Tony Trabert and the three top members of Australia's Davis Cup team crashed into the semi-finals of the Australian Naticial Tennis Championships Wednesday, leaving U.S. champion Vic Seixas among the victims.

Seixas, top-ranked American, was beaten by the unpredictable Lew Hoad, who showed flashes of his oldtime brilliance in smashing out a 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 8-6 victory. 'He was too tough," Seixas said afterwards. "I was out there to win but Lew played too well."

Advancing with Trabert and Hoad, now favored to go into the finals for another of their great slugging battles, were little Ken Rosewall and flashy Rex Hartwig. In Saturday's semi-finals, Trabert plays Rosewall and Hoad meets Hartwig. Rose Routed

Trabert, showing none of the effects of his blistered racquet fingers, put on one of his most powerful performances to eliminate defending champion Mervyn Rose, canny lefthander, 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1. Rosewall, steady and showing near perfect racquet control, breezed past rangy Ashely Cooper. Australia's No. 1 junior, 6-4, 6-2, 6-0. Although they wisely refused to do any comparing with the Northern Division teams, San Franciscans Lou Batmale and Bill Scollin, two veteran Southern Division basketball officials who worked the Oregon-Oregon State series, predicted that the San Francisco Dons would most assuredly be playing in the NCAA regional tourney at Corvallis in March.

"The Dons are the class of the Bay Area and deserve their rating in the weekly polls," our compatriots were telling us. "You'll see a great player in this Bill Russell, who is six-ten in height and can high jump six-feet, seven-inches. But he's not the only standout on the team. They have some very good outside shooters whose ability makes Russell that much more effective on the inside, Furthermore, the Dons play terrific defense, with Russell and his jumping ability knocking down shot after shot before they ever get near the basket" . . .

West Point of Air' Considers Lombardi

One of the leading figures in the quest for a football coach at the Air Force "West Point of the Air" in Colorado when it is completed is Vince Lombardi, former Fordham Rams "Block of Granite" who served as No. 1 assistant to Jim Lee Howell with the New York Pro Giants the past season. Acclaimed as a shrewd and capable football man, Lombardi gained much of his prominence as an assistant to Jim Lee Howell with the Post season. We should be hearing one of these days whether the Giants will be back again for training at Willamette U. If the Seattle exhibition with San Francisco, as mentioned, and another in Portland with Los Angeles can be arranged, then we're quite likely to get them back again. If not, they'll arrange for a camp in the vicinity of the stadiums in which they will play their first two or three exhibitions in August and September . . .

Not unlike many others, we're happy to see Swede Halbrook back with the O-Staters, and not because his presence makes the Bevos a stronger ball club. Rather instead, the way in which the entire suspension was handled, and the way it turned out, may be the turning point for the big kid's future. He learned that he is not the turning point for the big kid's future. He learned that he is not indispensable when the Staters won their first Oregon game without him, and the second with practically no help from him at all. Perhaps now he will settle down to becoming that which is expected of him. He received a great break.

It all worked out perfectly for Slats Gill too. Had the Beavers lost to Oregon prior to Halbrook's reinstatement, it would have possibly had a telling effect on not only Halbrook, but on an observer's opinion of a coach with a very difficult problem to solve . . .
