Bottom Teams Have Brighter Futures

On the other end of the ladder in both conferences were a pair of teams with little experience available among squad members, but certainly fine chances to build for future campaigns. Coach Bob Livingston's OCE Wolves wound up their season with but two wins in 16 OCC efforts, but with nary a senior on his squad Livingston should have a live wire quint next year. The likeable Wolf mentor used a special running lineup against EO-CE over the weekend and very nearly was able to match the point-happy Mounties both nights. With Larry Chamberlain and Ron Jones moved to forward spots from their regular guard posts and Darrel Davis and Van Summers, freshman from Corvallis, playing the guard positions the Monmouth five had a rapid attack. Wayne Young was the fifth member of Livingston's crew, providing the rebounding strength he has so dependably put out during the latter stages of the season. Summers, in his first varsity starting action, hemped 30 points in the two games.

The Lewis & Clark Pioneers, Northwest Conference cellar dwellers stumbled in with a 3-12 record, the worst ever racked up by an Eldon Fix coached L & C team, and the initial cellar finish for the Portlanders. However, Guard Gary Jackson is the only Pioneer departing via graduation and his running mate from the past two years, Duane Brady, should be back in harness next season after missing most of this year's games due to illnes. Don't be urprised if Fix asks for another year of eligibility for Brady figuring that since the Powers smoothie didn't play any after December 21 he shouldn't get docked a whole year on his record . . . Dave Gardner, freshman forward from Gresham, is another bright home in the Pioneer future. Billy Martin, the New York Yan- end of the tourney trail.
